Groos Not Apologizing for Stand on Ensign

OTTAWA (CP)—David Groos (L-Victoria) acknowledged in the Commons Thursday he had written replies to his constituents saying he would do everything possible to try to keep the Red Ensign flying as Canada's national flag.

Liberal party policy is the proposed maple leaf flag.

Mr. Groos made the acknowledgement after George Chatterton, Conservative MP from the neighboring riding of Esquimalt-Saanich, read letters Mr. Groos had written to his constituents earlier this year.

Deputy Speaker Lucien Lamoureux said he doubted the propriety of Mr. Chatterton reading letters written by another MP. But he admitted he had no authority for such a ruling.

He said Mr. Chatterton's reading of the letters wasn't in the spirit of debate.

Mr. Chatterton said he had authority from the recipients of Mr. Groos' letters to read them in the Commons.

He said he had read them to show that Mr. Groos and other Liberal MPs wouldn't be allowed to vote as they wished on the flag issue.

Mr. Groos said he has been a supporter of the Red Ensign and that he makes no apologies for this stand.

However, when the flag had become an issue he had seen the need of looking far beyond his own personal views, of taking a detached view.

He had been heartened by the reaction of his constituents.

He said Victorians have taken a tolerant, restrained and understanding approach to the flag issue and that his mail indicates they are changing their view on the flag.

Red Attack

GI, Three Officers Killed by Viet Cong

PHU TUC (UPI)—Three U.S. army officers and one American enlisted man were slain by Communist Viet Cong guerrillas in a battle near here, it was announced today.

The Americans were with government forces which traveled to the area when it was attacked in force by the guerrillas Thursday.

Earlier, Communist fighters had devastated a government outpost near this village in the Mekong Delta, killing seven Vietnamese and wounding 11.

Airborne government troops drove off the guerrillas, killing two and capturing five. An American helicopter participating in the relief operation was shot down. The crew escaped injury.

The Viet Cong, in battalion strength, launched the assault at 2:45 a.m., with heavy fire from 60 mm mortars.

The outpost was afire hours after the attack. When newsmen arrived at the scene, survivors were dragging the charred bodies of two girls from the ruins. The body of a boy was nearby.

Vote Favors Cuba Break

LA PAZ (AP)—Bolivia's chamber of deputies, by a 37-40 vote Wednesday night, urged the government to break relations with Cuba under a decision voted by the Organization of American States in Washington recently, it was learned Thursday.

Bolivia, Uruguay and Mexico are the only American republics that maintain relations with Cuba.

Swim Grad Cheered By Swan

Elk Lake swan trumpets approval as Paul Peterson, 8, shows certificate he won Thursday for passing test after eight weeks in The Daily Colonist free swim classes. He is one of 900 in Victoria and Duncan who participated. (Jim Ryan)

Congo Forces Reinforced

LEOPOLDVILLE (AP)—Troop and ammunition reinforcements were rushed by air Thursday to Congolese forces losing ground in defending Bukavu from rebel hands. Three Americans were reported missing.

Radio messages from Bukavu's garrison of more than 800 soldiers said they had been pushed by the Communist-backed rebels back into the European quarter of Bukavu, the last important northeastern Congolese city still in government hands.

The U.S. Embassy in Leopoldville said no word had been received from Vice-Consul Lewis R. Macfarlane, 25, of Seattle, Wash., and two army officers attached to the U.S. military mission to the Congo.

They are Col. William A. Dodge, 50, a counter-insurgency expert, and Lt-Col. Donald V. Rattan, 40, an Alexandria, Va., infantry officer.

Consul Richard Matherson of Fresno, Calif., and the other five members of his staff notified the embassy by radio that they had reached safety at Kamembe Airport, about three miles from Bukavu, in neighboring Rwanda Republic.

A radio operator in the Belgian Consulate at Bukavu sent word that he was hit by a machine-gun bullet inside the consulate building, but not seriously wounded, and that another Belgian was killed in

Search Planes Find One American Alive

WINNIPEG (CP)—An ECAF spokesman said Thursday Peter Fries of Salt Lake City has been found alive on the shore of Lake Athabasca in a search for two Americans missing on a 500-mile flight between Edmonton and Stony Rapids, Sask. The other man was reported to be dead.

After City Postal Stake-Out

RECOVERED: $89,723

By BOB PETHICK

A Saanich detective stake-out in the Victoria post office Thursday led to the recovery of $89,723 in certified cheques and post office money orders.

As a result of their investigation, Saanich detectives charged a 32-year-old mother of two with breaking and entering and theft and dealing in forged documents.

Saanich police had been working on the theft of $9,000 in money orders from the A & B Hardware, 650 West Burnside, which was broken into in March.

Western Canada

Bank Bill Stalled In House

OTTAWA (CP)—The Commons passed two private bills and gave second reading to a third Thursday, but the bill to incorporate the proposed Bank of Western Canada failed again to get through second reading in the weekly hour devoted to private bills.

Henri Latulippe (Creditiste-Compton-Frontenac) held up the bill with a sweeping criticism of the Canadian banking system.

TIGHT HOLD

Chartered banks have such a tight hold on the country that average citizens have no room to breathe, he said. The trouble could not be corrected by establishing another.

Jack Horner (PC—Acadia) said the proposed bank is masquerading under its name. It would be more appropriate to call it the Bank of Eastern Canada since the control rested in the East.

The Commons gave second reading to a bill to incorporate the Laurentide Bank of Canada. There was no discussion.

It gave third and final reading to a bill allowing the Guarantee Company of North America to also use the name La Garantie, Compagnie d'assurance de l'Amérique du Nord.

Man Held In Prison 'Illegally'

VANCOUVER (CP)—Lawyer Gordon Dowling said Thursday he will proceed with habeas corpus in an attempt to obtain the release of a man found not guilty of attempted murder by reason of insanity and who he said now is being illegally held in prison.

Paul McCullagh was arrested after firing a rifle in a city cafe and was charged with attempted murder. A jury found him not guilty by reason of insanity Dec. 28, 1961.

Mr. Dowling said he was sent to Esquimalt Mental Hospital but since then, by various orders-in-council, had been alternately held in Oakalla Prison and at the Chilliwack forest camp, operated by penal authorities.

'Yacht Missing-So Is Train Robber'

British Cargo Ferry Shows Up the Navy

LONDON (AP)—They called out the Royal Navy and the Royal Air Force Thursday to chase a stolen luxury yacht suspected of carrying one of the great train robbers who had just escaped from prison.

But a ferryboat beat the Royal Navy to the kill—and found only two boys who had escaped from a reform school.

An armed boarding party was assembled on the submarine HMS Russell, which had sped from her berth at Glasgow. A submarine was diverted from routine patrol. An admiral directed operations.

As they rushed toward the stolen yacht, in the Irish Sea, the Sleevemore, a work-stained British railways cargo ferry, stumbled onto the yacht and drew alongside.

Two boys, aged 14 and 16, were taken off the yacht, the Wild Venture. Finally the Russell came up and took the stolen vessel in tow, 12 miles off Dublin.

The Sleevemore, the Russell and the Wild Venture then began a triumphant procession back to Holyhead in north Wales, near the point where the yacht was stolen.

The train robber? Police were still looking for him.

Theft of the 75-ton yacht, valued by her owner at about $60,000, had all the earmarks of a professional job. Police immediately suspected it might be carrying Charles Frederick Wilson, who escaped from prison last week.

Wilson had just started a 30-year term for his part in the £2,600,000 ($7,800,000) train robbery last year.

For Olympics

Satellite in Position

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP)—Syncom 3 Thursday received a firing command designed to station it high above the earth as the world's first truly stationary satellite.

The U.S. Space Agency said it would be several hours before results of the firing are known.

The "Olympic Star" satellite, launched Wednesday, is intended to jockey into a hovering position high above the mid-Pacific Ocean where it would be able to televise the Olympic Games from Japan to North America.

As the satellite swept above Sumatra at 10:17 a.m. PDT Thursday, a station at Salisbury, Australia, beamed the firing signal. A space agency statement said a small rocket aboard Syncom 3 ignited as planned and burned for 19.6 seconds, the prescribed time.

The statement said preliminary data indicated the satellite was performing normally, but

"it would be a number of hours until it is known whether the satellite has indeed achieved the world's first truly stationary orbit."

The firing was to switch Syncom 3 from a wide-looping path ranging from 685 to 23,675 miles high into a circular stationary orbit in which both the high and low points would be about 22,300 miles up and the craft would hang over one spot of the earth permanently.

B.C. Socred Charges

Rightists Use Thompson

VANCOUVER (CP)—The president of the British Columbia Social Credit League said Thursday there is growing disenchantment in B.C. party circles with the national leadership of Robert Thompson.

George Driediger said it is time Mr. Thompson publicly dissociated himself with what is termed, a right-wing movement that included Ron Gostick, head of the Christian Action Movement.

CLARIFY POSITION

Mr. Driediger, in an interview, said the party leader also should clarify his position toward federal Liberals.

The B.C. president said he will ask a league board meeting to demand such a statement from Mr. Thompson.

"I am personally dissatisfied that some people have used Bob Thompson," he said, "and in the process have caused embarrassment to the B.C. Social Credit League."

He said at the present time there is growing dissatisfaction with the way the party is being led.

'Reject Force But Obey Law'

ATLANTIC CITY (AP) — A southern governor appealed Thursday for a civil rights plank pledging the Democratic party to "adhere to the law of the land" but to reject "federal intimidation."

The peace-making role between the party's civil rights antagonists was attempted by Governor Carl Sanders of Georgia, who personally opposed the public accommodations section of the new Civil Rights Act.

COMMON RIGHTS

He told the Democratic platform committee, in hearings transferred Thursday from Washington, that Democrats must see that the common rights of citizenship are impartially assured, but with a further pledge that:

"The intent of this law should be achieved through local people in their own local communities, and not through fear of federal force or federal intimidation."

Justice and moderation should be keywords of the National Democratic Convention opening here next week in Atlantic City.

advance of the Nov. 3 U.S. presidential election, the Georgian said. He rapped at the Republican Party's civil rights plank by declaring:

"In contrast to the opposite party, we must not juggle words or facts to appease the clamoring moment... We must not dispense frustrated vengeance in the name of justice."

DRIVING FORCE

Sanders is the driving force of a behind-scenes effort to win agreement among southern delegates on the 102-member platform committee for a mild civil rights plank pledging enforcement of the sweeping rights act.

Though this effort has met resistance in several southern delegations, the platform committee officials gave hints of growing optimism that a party-splitting floor fight on the issue can be avoided.

GOOD CHEER

Their good cheer was based partly on Wednesday's declaration by Attorney-General Robert F. Kennedy that he sees no need for a platform promise to seek new civil rights laws. The act signed last month, Kennedy testified, is broad enough to satisfy the 1960 Democratic pledges on civil rights.

Americans Dead?

front of the central post office during heavy fighting Wednesday night.

A Bukavu resident reported by telephone to Shangugu, Rwanda, that a shell hit a truck loaded with rebel youths and scattered their bodies around the wrecked vehicle. He said five other bodies lay in front of the Belgian Consulate, whose front wall was pocked with bullet holes.

U.S. Air Force C-130 transport planes, newly arrived in the Congo, were ferrying reinforcements to Congolese Col. Leonard Mulamba and his men.

Mulamba, on the defensive in the European quarter, a peninsula jutting into Lake Kivu, reported he hoped to shift to the offensive, with sufficient reinforcements.

Rebels thrust into Bukavu's suburbs last weekend, but were driven back.

Meanwhile, across the Congo River from Leopoldville, in Brazzaville, the Congo Republic's foreign minister called on the Organization of African Unity to investigate worsening relations between the two Congos.

Premier Moise Tshombe Wednesday ordered all citizens of the Congo Republic (Brazzaville), Burundi and Mali deported on grounds their governments were assisting the rebels.

The Congo (Leopoldville) is a former Belgian colony and the Congo (Brazzaville) is a former French possession.

A message reaching the United Nations told of the fighting in Bukavu and how the three Americans may have been captured.

Raffan and Dodds belong to the U.S. military mission to the Congo. They were sent to Bukavu recently to observe anti-rebel operations. Macfarlane was believed to have been with them as interpreter when nine truckloads of rebels crashed into Bukavu Wednesday.

Johnson Policy Walks Tightrope Over the Congo

By CARMAN CUMMING
President Johnson has been cautioned by Moscow and Peking—and by one of his own Democratic senators—not to let the Congo become an "African Viet Nam."

It's a safe bet that another Viet Nam is just about the last thing the American president wants as the autumn election campaign comes on.

But the other horn of his dilemma is that he can't afford, politically or strategically, to let the big and wealthy Congo fall by default to a Communist-orientated rebellion.

It is with these factors in mind, apparently, that Johnson has authorized limited military aid to the warring Congolese regimes of Premier Moise Tshombe.

There are any number of good reasons why the U.S. might want to stay far away from the Congolese shambles.

One is the proven difficulty of bringing stability to such a massive and untamed country. Another is the risk of bringing the Congo openly into the cold war arena. A third is the danger of antagonizing other African countries which have no love for Tshombe.

American policy-makers can hardly fail to miss the irony of a situation in which the American taxpayers are paying to uphold Tshombe's regime. Less than two years ago they were paying to unseat his Katanga province regime.

And the Congo's African neighbors can hardly fail to be unhappy about the return of white mercenaries, leftovers from Tshombe's Katanga army, to fly U.S. aircraft against the rebels.

Postal Stake-Out

nominations ranging from $4,000 to $7,200 and in different names. Police found money orders ranging from $1 to $38. A number of money orders were in partly-addressed envelopes.

Det. Sgt. Stewart said the stolen money orders had been cashed all over the province and the last few had been cashed in the Kamloops and Vernon area.

SAVINGS BONDS
He said the investigation was made in co-operation with post office authorities.

Police also recovered a $1,000 and a $50 Canada Savings Bond which they said had been taken from a bank here.

A woman is scheduled to appear in Sanich magistrate's court this morning.

Excessive Exposure to Sun Can Have Harmful Results

By JOSEPH MOLNER, MD

Dear Dr. Molner: My teenage daughter is self-conscious because she doesn't have a tan. She doesn't enjoy lying in the sun, and she really does not tan readily. So she wants to use a sunlamp.

I have read about the danger of the sun causing skin cancer, and wonder if the lamp would be better. At least it would be more comfortable and faster, she thinks.—MBA, W.C.

ORDINARY AMOUNT

An ordinary amount of sunbathing, whether outdoors or with a lamp, seems to do no harm. Excessive exposure, does, whether from the sun or from a lamp. In either case, it is the action of ultra-violet rays.

The danger arises when exposure continues for a long time, and is repeated year after year. Susceptible are sailors, farmers and sometimes people in the south who get too much sun. And we could add persons who regard a leathery tan as a status symbol.

If your daughter prefers a sunlamp, that's all right, but she should use it gradually enough so that she doesn't burn. However, I doubt that she would be tempted to cook herself to a harmful degree.

Dear Dr. Molner: My blood was recently tested for diabetes and it was 162. My doctor told me not to worry. At what level should one become concerned?—D. G.

This depends on when the test is taken, in relation to meals. If it was taken before breakfast (we call this a "fasting blood sugar") the reading is normal, yet it does not rule out the possibility of diabetes.

But if the test was taken one or two hours after a meal, then the reading leaves you in the clear.

The reason: Many mild diabetics have a normal fasting blood sugar, but this quickly goes to high levels after eating.

If there is even slight suspicion of diabetes, either in your history or symptoms, a further test, called a sugar tolerance test, will give a more definite answer.

Dear Dr. Molner: Is there any special diet for a person who has developed a hiatus hernia? I am 62. Does this condition tend to get worse?—C. A. M.

For the average hiatus hernia, no special diet is required. (If the patient is too heavy, he benefits by losing some weight.) However, if the case involves burning in the pit of the stomach, bleeding, or regurgitation of acid material, a bland diet is advisable.

Hiatal hernias may enlarge, but more often they do not. When symptoms persist, surgery may be necessary.

Huge Fraud Suspected

Blaze Starts Police Probe

TEL AVIV (Reuters)—A blaze in the head office of the Canadian-owned Supracol Company last month started a full-scale police investigation which has covered suspected arson as well as detailed investigations of alleged forgeries, mismanagement and fraud.

Police sources said the exact figures involved in the alleged fraud have not yet been established but a statement of a police officer in court says at least 4,000,000 Israeli pounds (about $1,300,000) of the company's funds were siphoned off during the last few years.

UNDER SCRUTINY
The affairs of Supracol, which runs a chain of supermarkets in Israel, had been scrutinized for some time before the fire following suspicion that the books of the company were tampered with.

But matters began to move swiftly after July 19, when documents of the company were destroyed in the flames.

OFFICIAL ARRESTED
Ten days later, the managing director of Supracol, Abraham Feinberg, 33, a Detroit native, was detained by police. On July 30 he was remanded in custody pending inquiries into allegations of theft, arson, forgery, destruction of evidence and obtaining money by false pretences.

Feinberg has been released on bail of 300,000 Israeli pounds (about $100,000).

New Canadian

MONTREAL (CP)—Montreal Canadiens have signed goalkeeper Gary Bauman of Calgary, who played four seasons with Michigan Tech and is rated an outstanding prospect. He is 24.

Five Party Leaders to Meet

Conference Scheduled Today On Parliamentary Stalemate

OTTAWA (CP)—The five-party leaders will hold a further conference today in efforts to break the current parliamentary stalemate over the maple leaf flag proposal and other business.

It will be their third meeting this week and in the opinion of one of them will make or break the future of this session of Parliament.

RED ENSIGN

Opposition Leader Diefenbaker, holding out for retention of the Red Ensign as Canada's flag, declined comment on the meeting Thursday with Prime Minister Pearson, attended by the three minority party leaders.

But NDP Leader Douglas said the further meeting was called for today because of new proposals being discussed. He would not say what the proposals were, but observed that it was "possible, just possible" that a major compromise would be reached.

DOUGLAS HOPEFUL

Asked whether today's meeting might be a solution, he told reporters: "It will either do it, or we can't do anything."

The meetings are reported to have discussed various alternatives to the government's proposal to adopt a national flag showing three red maple leaves on a field of white, with blue borders on either side, and recognize the Union Jack as symbolic of Canada's membership in the Commonwealth.

ONE ALTERNATIVE
One alternative is to adopt a national flag showing one large maple leaf and retain the Red Ensign as a Commonwealth flag.

Also reported to have been discussed is some way of limiting the flag debate, which was in its 12th day Thursday.

There Are No Virgins In the Commonwealth

OTTAWA (CP)—The Commonwealth is free from virgins, External Affairs Minister Martin told a laughing Commons Thursday.

Russell Maclean (PC—Pictou) had asked whether aid would be extended to the Virgin Islands.

Mr. Martin said: "The Commonwealth is free from virgins."

The Virgin Islands are no longer part of the Commonwealth.

OTTAWA (CP)—The U.S. Federal Bureau of Investigation has been asked for information about the movements of Hal Banks, deposed Canadian president of the Seafarers' International Union, Justice Minister

He also told the Commons the RCMP is doing everything it can to obtain information about Banks' whereabouts.

Mr. Favreau said the FBI has not yet reported back.

Canadian Heads Operation

UN Razes Turk Site

NICOSIA (CP)—A special force of Canadian, Danish and Finnish United Nations troops overrode a armed opposition Thursday to demolish three sandbagged Turkish-Cypriot positions overlooking UN headquarters in this capital of Cyprus.

About half-a-dozen angry Turkish - Cypriots brandishing arms tried to oppose the operation, but the UN troops held their ground and completed the job within 20 minutes.

It marked the initiation of a special UN detachment known as the Delta Force under the command of Maj. John Beaumont of Ottawa, a member of the Royal Canadian Dragoons.

There was a scuffle between the UN troops and Turkish-Cypriots, but no shots were fired.

The tough UN action came as the UN reported the largest single shooting incident on troubled Cyprus since an agreed cease-fire between the feuding Greek- and Turkish-

Cypriot communities more than a week ago.

In Nicosia, the Greek-Cypriot interior ministry complained that Turkish - Cypriot captured "three senior Greek-Cypriot officials."

Greek Defence Minister Petros Garoufalas flew here Thursday night for what he termed an inspection of the 950-strong Greek Army contingent based in Cyprus.

Garoufalas told the Greek-Cypriot army commander, Gen. George Grivas, that eventual "Enosis (Union with Greece) is a sure thing."

Turkish Planes Break Promise

NICOSIA (CP)—Two Turkish planes flew over the coast of Cyprus late Thursday after a break outburst of communal fighting near the town of Kitima, Cyprus military headquarters charged Thursday.

A statement said the planes flew over the Kokkina area, the last Turkish-Cypriot enclave on the northwest coast. In response to a United Nations appeal, Turkey announced Aug. 12 it would suspend reconnaissance flights for the time being.

Cyprus Problem

Peace Could Rest On UN Payments

UNITED NATIONS (AP)—General U Thant said Thursday there is hope for peace in Cyprus but that unless the UN membership produces more than $2,000,000 soon to pay the costs he may have to pull out the UN peace force.

The estimated cost of the force for a six-month period ending next Sept. 26 was $12,730,000, Thant said. UN members have pledged only $10,000,000.

"If the necessary financial support is not forthcoming . . . it would appear necessary that the force may have to be withdrawn even before Sept. 26," he said.

Canada has 1,126 men in the force.

In a far-ranging press conference, the first since he returned from talks in July and August in Paris, Moscow and Washington, Thant said the situation in Southeast Asia is deteriorating and that the Congo is going through a critical stage again.

The secretary-general refused to be drawn out by correspondents' questions aimed at getting him to criticize the United States for sending warplanes to the Congo at the request of the Congo government or to comment on rumors that exiles from Fidel Castro's Cuba were being recruited to pilot the planes.

Russians Give Guns

LONDON (UPI)—The Soviet Union will give Cyprus anti-aircraft equipment in response to President Makarios' request for aid, while reserving a decision on massive arms support, diplomatic sources said Thursday.

Far from Realistic

THE SOVIET UNION'S effort at the 17-nation Geneva disarmament conference to secure approval for the idea of calling a world meeting to sign a pact outlawing the use of nuclear weapons can be seen as another in a series of propaganda moves, and probably not too successful at that.

The Western allies were put in the position of having to oppose it—as an empty gesture, which it was, and as a substitute for the meaningful target of limiting and eventually getting rid of nuclear arms. But the least imaginative of peoples would surely regard a pact against using them as a token, perhaps, but no safeguard.

In the last resort, supposing a country possessing atomic weapons to be pressed to the limit in a "conventional" war, it is impossible to believe that they would not be brought into play. Indeed there may have been a hint of this in the Russian suggestion that the proposed agreement would be on "nuclear non-aggression," which seemingly would leave the way open for anything that might be termed nuclear defence.

But the full measure of the lack of realism in the resolution brought to the fore by the Soviet delegate, Mr. Tsarapkin, was his assertion that any nation using nuclear arms after signing the convention would find itself in "political quarantine."

How much would that matter to any country that had just initiated, or invited, the final holocaust?

Shades of Sir John

IN HIS EFFORT to down the opposition request for a national poll on the flag issue Trade Minister Sharp reaches back into Canadian history.

"I can imagine," he says, "what Sir John A. Macdonald would have done with the idea of a plebiscite on Confederation. Sir John was a more sensible man."

The analogy is irrelevant, and there can be no telling how Sir John would react to the flag situation were he alive today. Except for one thing. He certainly wouldn't subscribe to the abolition of the Red Ensign.

Nor is it likely that were the former great Conservative leader sitting in opposition to the Pearson regime Mr. Sharp would then concede that he was a "sensible" man.

But it is strange the latter should turn to Sir John as a guide. He could have invoked the example of a leader of past fame of his own party faith, Mackenzie King, for instance. He had no tremors about holding a national plebiscite, and on a matter affecting the emotions and pride of the nation equally with the flag issue. Nor did he consider, as the Pearson government does, that the public had no right to a voice in deciding an important measure.

Mr. Sharp condemns the legitimate request for a plebiscite as "irresponsible." Is he thus suggesting that the former long-time Liberal prime minister was irresponsible when he let the public settle the description issue?

He is simply attempting to pick an example that suits his arguments best, of course, albeit it is one apt to make Sir John turn in his grave.

A pity indeed Sir John A. Macdonald wasn't in the Commons today. He would make smart work of the trade minister's use of him in relation to a national flag.

Sharing the Ships

TENDERS HAVING been called from west coast yards alone it is reported likely that the reconstruction job on the naval destroyer Margaree will come to a local plant. This will be heartening news for the shipbuilding craftsmen of this area. It means work and a consequent boost to the local economy.

Where government ships have to be built it is right these should be spaced so that each shipbuilding area may share the employment they bring. The Canadian taxpayer who foots the bill is collective and all embracing.

And when naval vessels are stationed on this coast logic suggests they should be refashioned or refitted when this is necessary in the areas of their command, when this can be done efficiently and well close to home.

Earlier this year this pattern was broken when the Skeena contract was diverted to an eastern yard, enough to cause concern among civic and shipbuilding officials. Undoubtedly the visit of a west coast delegation to Ottawa, even if unsuccessful in the case of the Skeena, has had its effect.

The Margaree contract will keep some 250 shipwrights and other skilled craftsmen engaged for more than a year, and help sustain an industry of vital importance not only to Victoria or Vancouver but to the whole country.

This is a factor the government must keep in mind as it awards the naval and other shipbuilding contracts at its disposal. Together with a fair sharing of the work to be done.

Contradictory

IT WAS DIFFICULT to see just what, in a practical way, Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell meant when on Monday he called on the people of Greater Victoria to take part actively in the handling of their regional affairs through the proposed joint services board, or "mini-metro" as it has been dubbed. If as he surmises one source of discontent in today's society is lack of participation in government, the new board when and if it is created will hardly be of the sort to ease the ailment, any more than the water board or the health board at present.

But supposing that Mr. Campbell would like the populace of the region to regard the mini-metro operation with enthusiasm as an instrument for finding equitable answers to their common or overlapping problems in a number of fields, his desire for closed meetings while the delegates of the municipalities and unorganized areas are helping to frame the legislation to establish the board and its powers and duties is in strange contrast to this aim.

The minister's expressed view is that the proposed act cannot properly be made public until it is presented to the legislators. This, true enough, is the normal pattern when the government prepares its bills, and naturally so. It gives the party in power an edge in debate, even if it wears the guise of a courtesy.

But partisan politics should not enter into Mr. Campbell's joint services plan, and in this case the members of the Legislative Assembly—and not only the local members—will be better equipped to assess the measure if they know, and the public knows, what arguments have contributed to its design.

Thinking Aloud

"... of shoes, and ships, and sailing was ..."

By TOM TAYLOR

A NEWS item this week said that teen-age Beate fans in San Francisco, allowed the glory of a brief look at their idols, had "40 seconds in paradise."

I should hope paradise would be a much more pleasant experience.

The accompanying picture, you see, showed young girls as though horror-stricken by Frankenstein. Their ecstasy was compounded of agonized face and despairing hands.

If this be paradise now it's not what Omar Khayyam thought it was.

Some of us wouldn't want to go there anyway, I suppose. If the Beatles were to be part of the scene.

A Haida Canadian of quality and repute says an Indian should hang on to his band just as a Scotsman clings to the Burns Society.

So he should, more so in fact. Actually, it's only a small percentage of Scots who belong to a Burns Society. They might turn up for a taste of haggis at a "Burns Night" do, but otherwise they mostly pay the poet scant attention.

Only his devotees give the bard his due.

And they don't have to be Scots to be members of a Burns Society; whereas an Indian can hardly belong to a band if he isn't an Indian.

But of course pride of ancestry is a worthy thing.

Talking of faces, above, have you noticed what a joyless art singing has become? Once it was a blithe and happy expression of vocal sound; now it's a morose and unhappy odyssey.

If I am to judge by TV, the singers are going through agony. The contortions are astounding. Frankenstein himself couldn't surpass them.

And not alone the variations of the latest pop singer, trying to be different in the only way he knows—by yelling as though he's getting the third degree. The older ones who once sang with joy fall into the same grotesque pattern.

Their faces mince and mallow and their figures wilt in seeming suffering. Unfortunately it's the viewers who suffer.

Funny the reasons politicians may give for things.

The defence minister says a certain admiral was retiring because there were too many officers for his new program and the younger ones couldn't be the only ones pushed out.

Neither they can, but if the idea is to cut personnel this would imply the jobs were being abolished.

But the retired admiral is being replaced, and his replacement in turn is being replaced, and so on down the line. And there will always be senior naval officers required no matter the "tribulations" make-up of the forces.

So Mr. Hellyer seems rather wanting in his explanation.

The fund to pay for a memorial plaque for that fine Indian artist, the late Chief Mungo Martin, is slow growing.

In all conscience the amount sought is small, some $5,500. So little the government under Prime Minister Mungo Martin made Thunderbird Park a centrepiece of native art and tradition might well have completed the theme by providing the plaque itself.

So far only around $700 has been subscribed. The sponsors should ask for a tag day. That should clear up the campaign in a jiffy, and honor would be satisfied.

North Viet Nam

The Communists Asked for It

By HOWARD GREEN
Former Secretary of State for External Affairs

IN the world of today there are always several countries in the spotlight; for example at present North and South Viet Nam, Cyprus and Congo are in that position; and in each case various other nations are involved.

Usually there are factors which justify sympathy for these countries on one score or another but North Viet Nam is the exception which proves the rule.

For a long time the North Vietnamese have been meddling dangerously; making trouble not only in South Viet Nam but also in neighboring Laos. If they had left these countries alone there would be no serious trouble in Southeast Asia and all these new countries, including North Viet Nam itself, could have been steadily improving their economies and their standards of living.

But for some reason best known to the Communist leaders, North Viet Nam has followed the opposite course. Not only has she trained anti-government personnel from South Viet Nam and Laos but in addition she has supplied them with equipment and has sent members of her own armed forces into their territory.

When recently she went one step further and made an unprovoked attack on United States destroyers, in international waters where they had every right to be, she was asking for exactly what she got.

Now it will be interesting to see whether the leaders of North Viet Nam have learned their lesson.

Throughout they have been backed by Red China and there are some signs that she will take military action in their support against the United States. However, I doubt that the Chinese leaders are so foolish.

no matter how tough they talk or how little they care for human life. More likely they will be subtle and try to get the Americans deeply involved in a guerrilla type of action with the North Vietnamese.

The Russians, strange to say, have been unusually quiet about this flare-up in Southeast Asia. I am sure they have no stomach for a nuclear war started over that area. They certainly would not mind giving the Americans as much to worry about as possible, but why risk destruction of the Soviet itself over Viet Nam—or Laos—or Red China?

In the present state of their relations with Red China there is little they can do with the Chinese on the question. Indeed the Russians might well have their troubles and potentially dangerous ally get its fingers burned over Viet Nam.

Sometimes they must wonder why they helped Red China build her armed forces and make great strides in the scientific field. That was a very unwise policy, as events are now proving.

Russia herself will probably be the first country to face a possible large-scale attack by China.

When one recalls the hundreds of miles of common boundary between these two giants in Asia—and the attempts of the Red Chinese to undercut the Russians not only under the Red Chinese but also in Africa and in Latin America—and when one reads the bitter attacks made on Premier Khrushchev by Chinese leaders—one can expect anything.

Certainly the Americans will not give up in Southeast Asia no matter how rough the road may be for them there. They have the main responsibility for preventing any spread of Communism in the area; they have the necessary power and they are in no mood to be kicked around by North Viet Nam, Red China or by the Soviet Union.

Meanwhile, Canada continues to serve as a member of the three-nation truce supervisory commission in Viet Nam with responsibility in both North and South although the headquarters of the commission is in Saigon, the southern capital. At present service on this commission seems a waste of personnel and of money. Our representatives, as well as the Indians and Poles, must find it hard to keep out of the way of the belligerents, let alone accomplish any worthwhile results.

For about 10 years we have served on this commission. The experience gained has been beneficial and Canada's prestige in the world has been increased by this activity. The peace-keeping role is ideal for her and no nation has a finer record in that field. By this type of work we help prevent all-out war which inevitably would bring about our own destruction; also we promote understanding and goodwill among the nations both vital if there is to be co-operation rather than bloodshed.

But in Viet Nam events have brought about a situation in which our work is now of little value. Perhaps eventually with the knowledge we have gained of the country and through our contacts with its leaders we may be able to help find a solution. That will only be if and when the North Vietnamese have learned their lesson.

No Time Now

Errors Excepted

By CARRANDRA from London

AT the bottom of accounts and bills there used to be a cryptic code which said: "E. and O. E."

You don't often see it now, but it means: "Errors and Omissions Excepted." It was about as foolish an abbreviation as you could devise, for its real implication was: "We're quite liable to bungle our accounts and if we have made yet another muck-up, please excuse our sloth and incompetence."

It now seems that there has been a bit of "E. and O. E." over the massive American retaliatory raids on North Viet Nam naval bases.

What appears to have happened is that, unwittingly, an American destroyer turned up by chance off the North Viet Nam coast on the same day that South Viet Nam forces attacked the island of Hainan.

The North Viet Nam torpedo boats jumped to the conclusion that the destroyer had been screening the South Viet Nam attack and, in a jittery moment, let fly.

This part of the provocative attack may well have been made in confusion and error, just like those old accounts in which you got a bill for five shillings added to an item of £2 4s., making a total of £3 9s.—I don't think.

All over America there is reported to be a feeling of unity, national resolution and satisfaction that President Johnson strook back with such vigor.

In fact, he was in such a hurry to announce the retaliation that the bombers had not even reached their target before he told the nation.

The result is he has stolen some of the high-explosive thunder from Senator Goldwater, who hastened to congratulate him, and thus helped President Johnson politically by endorsing the kind of action that Goldwater supporters dearly love.

All this is fine, but when warlike action is sparked off by a mistaken appreciation of a situation, dire consequences are liable to occur.

I suppose you could take a few chances when Muslims ruled the world, but not with thermo-nuclear bombs.

There is no time in the 1960s for military Errors and Omissions to be Excepted.

FOR six months Oklahoma City has been used as a guinea-pig city.

It was chosen by the U.S. Federal Aviation Agency as an area over which to create some booms, those man-made thunderclaps that super-sonic aircraft make when they go through the sound barrier.

The purpose was to see if the public could get used to living with these enormous bangs.

During the trial period of some six months, Oklahoma was subjected to 1,262 sonic booms.

The wretched citizens complained by telephone to the authorities 12,400 times—an average of nearly 100 protests a day.

There are no figures for complaints by writing or in person.

Eight thousand people asked for compensation for damage done to their property in the shape of broken window-panes, cracked ceilings and walls and shattered crockery.

All the signs are that the Anglo-French Concord aircraft, which is designed to fly at 1,400 miles an hour, will also generate these acoustic disturbances.

It is an extraordinary situation. An infinitesimal fraction of the British population—say, 200 out of 30,000,000 (one-twenty-five-thousandth of one per cent)—will be flying in a Concord to New York in three hours.

They will see nothing. They will hardly have a moment to spare for rest and will rarely, if ever, be in an emergency that justifies their velocity. All around them and below them, over our shores and counties, they will be spreading an intolerable racket accompanied by a swath of destruction.

What a way to treat a civilization.

SOME time ago I experienced a good deal of wonderment about the sweet mystery of life when I came across a Lion Tamer of Tahrir and Damascus who also tamed pianos.

Now there comes a lovely successor in an item from a West Country paper.

It is about a girl of exquisite curves (36-26-36) from Bristol who went topless into a Bristol Beauty competition.

Her occupation was that of a Turkish Delight Decorator in a chocolate factory.

Just what does a Turkish Delight Decorator do in a chocolate factory?

The verticals for Montclair?

The squiggles for that awful filling that tastes of violet-scented hair oil?

The qualifications of the shapely female become tougher every day.

Integrity Campaign Issue

By RICHARD WILSON
from Washington

Dean Burch, Senator Goldwater's Republican national chairman, is outlining three large categories of issues for 1964, the third of which is integrity in office.

William E. Miller, the vice-presidential nominee, is more explicit. He charges a cover-up in the Bobby Baker case which protects President Johnson's special assistant, Walter Jenkins. "We don't claim that Lyndon Johnson made any profits out of his protegee, Bobby Baker's business operations, or attack Johnson's personal integrity, but we do allege that the record indicates a cover-up," says Miller. "Jenkins is still in the White House; at least in the Eisenhower administration. Sherman Adams was booted out."

This is but one phase of a larger issue which has been in the air for a couple of years and is widely discussed publicly and privately. To what extent are public officials able to feather their nests in perfectly legitimate business enterprises for the reason that they hold positions of power even if they do nothing overt to use this power for personal gain?

The question rises in connection with the personal wealth of the Johnson family, variously estimated at from $7,000,000 to $14,000,000, and all growing supposedly from Mrs. Johnson's $30,000 inheritance and in the 30 years while President Johnson rose to the pinnacle of power in federal office.

The Wall Street Journal, Life magazine, U.S. News and World Report and other publications have published detailed but circumstantial accounts of the development of the television and other properties in Austin, Tex., the operation of a Johnson philanthropic trust, and various land transactions in the Austin area and other areas by associates of President Johnson.

The plain implications of these accounts, indeed the primary reason for publishing them, is to imply, James Reston states in the New York Times, that Johnson might have "used political power to gain money."

A paper back book entitled "A Texan Looks at Lyndon — A Study in Illegitimate Power" is in wide circulation. The book's author is J. Evetts Haley, described as a "Cowman and Historian."

He discusses among many other things Mr. Johnson's associations during his long political career with Brown and Root, Inc., a construction concern operating on a world-wide basis, the lower Colorado river development, the Bobby Baker case, the Austin television property and various business transactions.

What general facts emerge from these revealed entanglements of a lifetime in public office and private business?

First, it is clear that while Johnson was a congressman, a senator, majority leader of the senate, and vice-president, he and Mrs. Johnson were also concerned with building a family fortune from legitimate business enterprises, and did so successfully.

Secondly, some of these enterprises were in some way related, remotely or directly, with government regulation and other government activity.

Thirdly, Johnson, from his pinnacle of power in Washington, was in a position to influence government decisions in such a way as to affect favorably the private interest of himself, his family and his associates. There is no evidence that he did so.

But the questions are so many and so pertinent in this age of big government and big business that Johnson may be compelled before the presidential campaign is over to discuss more fully than he has yet the extent of the family fortune and how it was built.

Red China's Home Propaganda Misfires

Children Failed to Get the Message!

By RICHARD HUGHES, from Hong Kong

Communist China's top party-line film for 1964, a Soldier Named Chang Ka, which was awarded Chairman Mao the Tung's Red Banner Prize, has had a deplorable influence on children.

It is now being heavily censored for school audiences throughout China.

Comrade Wang Hai-Kai of the Teachers' Union explains the melancholy affair in a stern message to parents in the current issue of the periodical, Women of China.

"Children were expected to derive improved social consciousness from young Chang Ka's resourcefulness, bravery and readiness to learn and especially from his willingness to admit and correct his early faults," Comrade Wang writes.

"Although basically a good boy, Chang Ka committed many mistakes when he first joined the army. For example, he assaulted and bit other soldiers, pushed down the chimneys of people's houses, threw his comrades' uniforms in the river, tipped buckets of water over heads of his patient commanding officers and wickedly hid the regiment's rifles in a tree."

"This behavior is against discipline. However, young Chang Ka, helped by party commissars, his comrades and Chairman Mao's writings, finally admits his mistakes and boldly proves himself to be a competent soldier of the People's Republic."

"Unfortunately it has now been learned from many quarters that children do not grasp the real message of the film and instead of appreciating the young soldier's reform, they fight and bite one another, beating basins and bowls and shouting, 'I am soldier Chang Ka.'"

"There are also reports that in some villages children have discovered that with ropes and planks they can easily pull and push down the chimneys of small huts and commune buildings. This has caused considerable ill-will and unreasonable criticism of the film by the broad masses of the people."

Comrade Wang directs teachers and parents to "watch, guide and advise" their children's reactions even when they attend the censored version.

"Perhaps," he adds, "it would be safer to let them see only such gentler children's films as 'Red Flowers and I Love Chairman Mao.'"

From London

British newspapers have been much preoccupied for the past two weeks with the affairs of a small, very strict, secretive non-conformist sect, the Exclusive Brethren.

Its leader (or Apostle) "Big Jim" Taylor Jr., who has been on a visit to Britain, became in a short time so unpopular, the object of inquiries and attentions so unwelcome to him, that he felt himself forced to leave the country with his program of meetings uncompleted.

The day he left he was to have kept an appointment with Conservative MP Roger Gresham Cooke. This would have been the first occasion on which he had explained the hostile attitude of Brethren towards unbelievers and sought to justify the many cases of hardship which this attitude has given rise to.

But by this time the appetite of the Press for news of the Brethren had been so starved that Taylor had been molested and forced to leave meeting halls in so covert a way that he used this as his pretext to cut his appointment with Gresham Cooke and fled the country.

Taylor is a 64-year-old Brooklyn tailor who took over the leadership of the Brethren from his father six years ago, and began at once to tighten the rules of the sect.

The cause of all the recent trouble is the central doctrine of the sect, the doctrine of "separation." By a strict interpretation of the Biblical text—"Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers"—the Brethren justify their action in separating themselves, wherever possible, from outsiders.

Brethren may not eat or sleep with non-Brethren and this has led to many cases of marriages breaking up. They may not visit places of entertainment, own radio or television, keep pets or go to university.

Where one spouse takes a stricter view of these prohibitions than the other, this also has been known to lead to separation and divorce. All the time Taylor has been encouraging stricter observance.

Wherever Taylor has spoken in Britain, at Manchester, Liverpool, Aberdeen and Dorking, he has drawn large gatherings of Brethren. They all appear to have a certain similarity to one another: the same tight-drawn skin, the same sunken eyes, pale faces and subdued mid-Atlantic clothes.

The men all wear wide trilby hats and the women bonnet-like hats but no make-up. They seem to have large families and comfortable cars. They evince an undoubted happiness which is withdrawn from strangers. They are obviously virtuous.

It was, perhaps, unfortunate that the arrival of Taylor coincided with a judgment handed down in the High Court freeing a 10-year-old daughter from the custody of her mother, who had forbidden her to meet or play with other children and grown-ups, or to eat her meals with people who were not Brethren.

This coincidence led the press to dog Taylor's footsteps in an effort to secure his comment. Everywhere he went they followed. But all the meetings he addressed were strictly private. The doors were barred. Brethren guarded them closely, watching for the "unclean" presence of unbelievers.

Gresham Cooke hoped to succeed where the Press had failed. He became interested through two cases brought to him by constituents and eventually had compiled a dossier of 60 cases where the strictly enforced rules of the Brethren had led to bitter feelings and the break-up of families.

It has been left to an Oxford sociologist to raise a lone cry in explanation, and, to some perhaps, in extenuation of the Brethren's conduct.

Bryan Wilson, a Fellow of All Souls, Oxford, has made the point that the Brethren are doing only what many early Christians did. He instances the divorce laws as another example of religious attitudes causing unhappiness, and monasticism as a more respectable cause of the break-up of families.

Certainly it is true that the Press, which is more usually pleading for wider grounds for the ending of marriages, has found itself in this controversy in the more unusual position of pleading against the break-up of marriages.

The truth of the matter is, probably, that in an open society where democracy is practised, exclusiveness in itself sets up tensions. The Brethren appear not so much virtuous as anachronistic.

To humanists, for whom happiness is the highest good, non-conformity of the extreme kind practised by the Brethren is deeply offensive. So much so that it is almost impossible to tolerate it.

Leukemia Research On Exciting Brink

Several medical discoveries, including one made just three weeks ago and still not formally announced, have brought great expectations in leukemia research.

The most exciting, and disturbing, new finding is that the milk of cows contains particles which resemble leukemia viruses. Scientists believe there is no cause for alarm, for there is no evidence that bovine leukemia is linked to the human disease, but they want to explore the discovery quickly.

Leukemia is cancer of blood-forming organs. It has been shown to be caused in animals by viruses, and there is overwhelming evidence—but not proof yet—that the same is true in man.

There is also no proof, and this is a crucial point, that the leukemia viruses pass from one animal to another, or to man, in nature.

If viruses do cause human leukemia, it will be the first cancer in man whose cause has been found. The implications are enormous. Increased support for the theories that blame viruses for other cancers will be achieved, and the door will be opened to making a vaccine against leukemia and eventually other cancers.

In late July two teams of researchers turned electronic microscopes on cows' milk to find the particles. They worked under Dr. Louis L. Coriell of the South Jersey Medical Research Foundation and Dr. John Davenport of Charles Pfizer & Co.

Word of their discovery swept through the research community. One excited researcher in Texas it is said, took pasteurized milk from the container in his home refrigerator and found the particles.

There is no proof that the particles cause bovine leukemia, although cows do get the disease. However, virus-caused leukemia has been found in other animals, including mammals, and under very difficult laboratory conditions. The disease has been transmitted by the viruses to other species of animals.

City Council To Discuss Rezoning Bid

The refusal of Oak Bay to rezone the Victoria-owned Mountain View Home property so it could be sold to an apartment developer will be a topic at city council today.

The property is four acres in size and is located on Cadboro Bay road. The city is reported to have an offer of $100,000 if Oak Bay would rezone for apartment building.

"Our decision is not to rezone at the present time," said Reeve Allan Cox.

This is the second time an application from Victoria has been turned down. The first time was a request for high-rise apartments, the latest for buildings not to exceed eight storeys.

Diplomat Says:

Poland Wants Peace

Peaceful co-existence, as the only alternative to the horrors of war is the basis of Poland's foreign policy, Rotarians were told Thursday.

Z. L. Wolniak, Polish ambassador, in Victoria to make an official call on Lieutenant-Governor Pearkes, was addressing the service club's weekly luncheon meeting.

SCARS HEALED

He said that Poland, which faced total extermination during the last war, has healed the scars of war in the subsequent 20 years and has built a new country on socialistic lines.

Mr. Wolniak said the association with Russia has provided a guarantee of national security, and his country believes in peaceful co-existence.

"This means co-operation, compromises and cultural and scientific exchanges. Poland's desire for peace is sincere, not political," the ambassador declared.

Seven Tons of Hay Lost in Shed Fire

Seven tons of hay and a wooden shed were destroyed by fire Thursday afternoon on the West Saanich reserve opposite Tsartlip school.

The owner, Arthur Cooper, 7380 West Saanich Road, was working away from the reserve when the fire occurred.

THREE TRUCKS

Three trucks from Central Saanich volunteer fire department, under Deputy Fire Chief Donald Facey, worked in relays transporting water to the scene of the fire.

Two hours after the fire started the hay was still smoldering.

STUBBORN FIRE

"It's impossible to put out a fire in a pile of hay," the deputy said. "We'll have to spread the hay around before we can be sure the fire is safely out."

The shed was destroyed. It was used only for hay storage and contained no livestock.

Impaired Driver Pays $350 Fine

James E. Bailey, 638 Admirals Road, was fined $350 and his licence was restricted to business use for four months when he appeared in city magistrate's court Thursday for sentence on an impaired driving charge.

Also in city court, Victor P. Hawes of North Surrey and Douglas J. Birnie, 2341 Lansdowne, were each fined $20 for being minors in possession of liquor.

In Saanich magistrate's court Douglas J. Kolosoff was fined $20 for being a minor in possession of liquor.

Remanded for sentence to Sept. 3 after pleading guilty to theft under $50 was Danny E. Bradley, 888 Beckwith.

Involved were several articles of clothing taken from 4146 Grange, an unoccupied house, during the afternoon of July 20.

Ernest J. Keller of Campbell River was fined $50 and had his licence suspended when he pleaded guilty in city court to careless driving.

Police said he was driving with one arm around his passenger. Magistrate William Oster pointed out "there is a time and place for everything" and there was no justification for driving with one hand.

Watchbirds Earn Wings

WASHINGTON (AP)—The U.S. Army is wondering whether the job of scouting out a hidden enemy may be for the birds. And it is paying something more than chicken feed to find out.

Bridge Results

Winners of the weekly bridge tournament held at the Shore Hotel Wednesday were: 1. Mr. and Mrs. Rose Richter; 2. Mr. and Mrs. Richard Morton; 3. Mr. Morgan and James Mitchell; 4. Mrs. Danahoe and Margaret McAvoy. Winners of the Victoria District Bridge Club's charity party on Tuesday were: 1. Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Simpson; 2. Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Simpson; 3. Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Simpson; 4. Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Simpson.

The results of an initial study on birds' reconnaissance potential so encouraged army scientists at the Aberdeen, Md., proving ground that a $174,472 contract has been signed with General Atomics Corp. When the army awarded the contract it would say only that it was a "research program of training birds for field surveillance" and "the project is classified."

Thursday a spokesman did go a bit further: "The initial program was a study of the learning ability of birds. In this case, the study was to determine whether a bird can be taught to recognize the presence of a person and, if so, would the bird perform characteristic action indicating such recognition."

"The feasibility study indicated positively that a bird can be taught and that a bird will perform a characteristic response indicating recognition of the presence of a person."

"On the basis of this, a further study is being initiated." This is as far as the spokesman was willing to go.

Hunters have long believed that crows, and perhaps some game birds, have a system of surveillance and "communique" warnings of perils to the flock.

The army and General Atomics apparently are attempting to reduce this to a science in which birds warn of the presence of a man by a certain recognizable call or flight pattern.

From South Wales to West Africa to Victoria may be taking the roundabout way but Dr. G. P. Evans feels that he may have finally found his home port.

Tall, fair-haired Dr. Evans is replacing Dr. A. N. Beattie, who recently reached retirement age.

Beach Nudes Arrested

ST. TROPEZ, France (UPI) — Nude sunbathers scrambled in panic at Pampelonne Beach here Thursday, pursued by "plain-clothes" gradunes in bathing suits, and uniformed riot police.

Twenty-three men and women were arrested, but dozens escaped the police raid.

The police commissioner of the Cote d'Azur's currently most popular vacation town decided to act after receiving numerous complaints from other vacationers all summer long.

The commissioner chose the best-trained police officers to go out to the beach, just west of town, and set the trap. They gave the signal to waiting riot police, who jumped out from behind dunes ringing the beach.

The 23 were released after being booked on charges of outrage to public decency.

CAMPBELL ISLAND, N.B. (CP) — The wives of the leaders of the Canadian and United States governments officially opened the new Roosevelt Campobello International Park here Thursday.

cut the bright red ribbon across the doorway of the 34-room "cottage" which was the summer home of late President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

The former Roosevelt home on this remote island near the Maine-New Brunswick border is situated on 8½ acres. The most recent owner of the property, Dr. Armand Hammer and his

Information Storage-Room

Fastest and, presumably most accurate Olympic Games information ever will come from this room in Tokyo—the Olympic datacentre. Computers are now busy storing information which will lead to almost immediate dissemination of news—once Olympic events start.

Computers Are Olympic Stars

Mechanical Brains Take Over

TOKYO — Electronic registration of data regarding the United States team, nearly 400 strong, which will compete in the Olympic Games in October began here Tuesday.

The registration information is being stored in IBM computers where it will be used to prepare up-to-the-minute results of the Olympic Games for worldwide distribution. Dedicated Aug. 18, the Olympic datacentre with more than 100 units of electronic equipment is the largest computer installation in Asia.

The United States has a maximum registration of 290 men and

Silverberg in Top Form

Johnston Carries B.C. Hopes

SASKATOON — Doug Silverberg of Calgary looks more and more like the chief threat to defending-champion Nick Weslock in the Canadian amateur golf championships.

Silverberg staged an impressive display on the Riverside course here Thursday as he eliminated John Russell of Vancouver, 3 and 1, in second-round play and then followed up with a 4 and 3 win over the long-jumping Bunky Henry, Georgia state champion.

The Calgary ace, whose failure to be included in the Willingdon Cup team cost Alberta the team championships, meets comediator Ron Falk of Saskatoon in the quarter-finals.

Four of the five remaining B.C. golfers were eliminated Thursday with Johnny Johnston the only survivor. The Vancouver veteran took out youthful Terry Campbell of Vancouver, 1 up, in the morning and then ousted Bob Pidlaski of Winnipeg, 2 and 1, in the third round.

Hob Kidd and Bert Ticehurst, who made up the B.C. cup team with Johnston and Russell, both lost out in the third round, Ticehurst, who bested Colorado's Gary Palomus, 1 up, in the morning, lost out to Keith Alexander of Calgary, Kidd, a 3 and 2 winner over Dave Morland, former Ontario champion, was beaten by John Kilburn of Edmonton, 3 and 4.

Johnston meets Weslock in the quarter-finals, ex-champion Alexander takes on John Sirman of Fresno, the only remaining U.S. entrant, and Gary Cowan, also a former champion, is due to play Kilburn in the fourth match.

Weslock got a good tussle from Lane Bickel, diminutive Calgary youngster in the third round but his superior steadiness finally prevailed for a 3 and 2 win.

Lion Rookie Challenges WFC Kickers

Placement kickers are not having it all to themselves in the Western Football Conference individual scoring race although Calgary's Larry Robinson and Winnipeg's George Fleming are currently in the top three.

Sharing second place with Fleming at 30 points, only three less than Robinson's total, is Bob Swift, rookie full-back of the B.C. Lions.

Swift has a league-leading total of five touchdowns. Robinson and Fleming have yet to score a six-pointer.

Australians 162 and 10 for 1; MCC President Eleven 192 for 9 declared; Derbyshire 274 for 9 declared; Essex 213 for 5.

Warwickshire 223 for 9 declared; Surrey 113 and 23 for 2; Northamptonshire 227 for 8 declared; Hampshire 113.

"You can tell she's a soccer player just by the way she runs," said another track coach. "She doesn't bring her knees high enough or far enough through. And she wastes too much energy wobbling from side to side. But you can tell she has what it takes to be a real good one."

After being measured for clothes along with other potential distaff members of Canada's Olympic team, Marjorie was asked what she thought her chances were.

"I don't expect to make it," she said modestly. "I'm probably a couple of years away from being ready."

Perceval drooled at the sight of the high school youngster from the maritimes.

"That's one right out of the woods," he said. "She could be a great one."

Did Perceval think Miss Turner could be developed enough in the next two months to justify her being named to the Olympic team?

"Definitely. I'd say that in two months, with the proper coaching she'd be running the 100 meters in 11.4 or 11.5 and we have no one in Canada that can run that fast now."

It doesn't take a practiced eye to detect Marjorie's inexperience as a sprinter.

Soccer-Playing 16-Year-Old Is Canada's Fastest Female

By DICK BACON

MONTREAL (UPI) — Canada's fastest female won't be going to Tokyo this fall but mark down the name of Marjorie Turner as a future Olympic medal threat.

The one big "if" is Marjorie herself. Track experts say she has the potential. The chief question is whether Marjorie wants to be an Olympic sprinter. It seems the 16-year-old Lockport, N.S., Negro girl would rather play inside right on the local soccer team.

She was asked what it is about track she doesn't like. After a little urging, she reluctantly admitted:

"The running, I guess."

Marjorie is so new to track and field that she has had no expert instruction. This is only her first year of competition.

"We don't have a track team in Lockport," she disclosed during an interview at the recent Olympic track and field trials at St. Lambert, Que. Her first taste of sprinting came at the urging of a friend in Lockport who persuaded her to run in a nearby track meet.

"Yes, I won," she recalled after some prodding.

In a recent meet in Summerside, P.E.I., she set an age-group mark of 10.8 for the 100-yard dash. Earlier this summer at the Acadia relays interscholastic meet, she proved to be a one-gal track team, winning the 100 and 200 yard sprints, the broad jump and the high jump.

But it wasn't until the Olympic trials that she caught the attention of national track officials.

At windy Seaway Park, where the sprinters were bucking a head wind between six and 15 miles an hour, she won her opening 100 meter heat in 12.3. In the semi-final heat, she was caught in 12 seconds flat—by far the best time of the girls vying for a spot on the Olympic team.

She finished fourth in the finals in 12.4 as the wind again was a factor.

The fact she ran at all was a tribute to her courage and the skill of physiotherapist Bill

Head, whose full-time job is looking after the health of the Montreal Canadian hockey team.

"She had a bad muscle pull," Head explained. "I isolated the injury so she wouldn't damage it further, but it still was very painful for her to run on."

Perceval drooled at the sight of the high school youngster from the maritimes.

"That's one right out of the woods," he said. "She could be a great one."

War on Caterpillars

By M. V. CHESNUT, FRHS

Pests are on the wing with a vengeance these days, and one of the worst is our common white butterfly. Not that the butterfly itself attacks our plants, for it feeds only upon the nectar of flowers, but it has an unerring nose for all members of the cabbage family and lays its eggs on the leaves of cabbage, cauliflower, sprouts and the like. These hatch out into an army of hairy caterpillars, each one with a voracious appetite for brassica leaves, and soon our cabbage and cauliflower plants begin to look like lace curtains.

What to do about them is a bit of a problem. I have never been very keen on using poison sprays or dusts on vegetables and fruits which are nearing maturity and are soon to be eaten. True, we wash our vegetables, but some of our modern insecticides—DDT, for instance—have the nasty habit of accumulating in the body fat, and even tiny doses taken over a long period of time could build up to the point where illness results.

If you have only a few plants of the cabbage family in your garden, probably the simplest way to control the depredation of the white butterfly is to examine the backs of the leaves every couple of days and crush any of the egg masses found thereon. A light attack by the caterpillars can also be handled by hand-picking.

An old-time remedy which still works well is to water your brassica plants every few days with salt water. Use half a tablespoonful of common table salt per gallon of water and wet the leaves thoroughly, using a watering can. This doesn't kill the caterpillars, but it renders the leaves distasteful to the newly-hatched worms, and they will move elsewhere.

On a larger scale, spraying or dusting will be necessary. At this stage of growth, though, I think it is best to use the non-poisonous derris or pyrethrum insecticides. These are harmless to humans and all warm-blooded animals although deadly to insects and fish.

The cucumber plant has an appetite like a horse and needs continuous and regular feeding if the fruits are to be crisp and tasty and free from bitterness. The planting site should have been enriched with plenty of mellow old manure, but even in rich soil some supplementary feeding should be given.

Use any of the highly concentrated fertilisers applied in water, one tablespoonful per gallon, and each plant will take about a quart per week. Give the plants plain water first, for the fertilizer solution penetrates better in damp soil, and keep both water and liquid feed well out from the main stem, for cucumber plants are vulnerable to rot at the point where the stem emerges from the soil. Besides, the active root tips are anywhere from 8 to 18 inches out from the stem.

Cucumbers seem to prefer a bit of light shade, or if this isn't possible, at least see that the developing fruits are shaded by their own leaves, as exposure to the sun is a common cause of bitterness. As the plants revel in a humid atmosphere, it is a good idea to freshen up the leaves with a spray of clear water as often as you can manage.

Journalism, Literature Covers for Spy Activity

Fleming Was a James Bond

By MCKENHE PORTER

As a friend of the late Ian Lancaster Fleming, and the possessor of some information about him that came my way through wartime military channels, I can now write about his work as a secret service agent.

As far back as 1929, when he became, at 21, a recruit to the Berlin staff of Reuters's news agency, the author of the James Bond novels began to employ journalism and literature as a cover for British espionage and counter espionage activity.

Throughout his adult life Fleming was linked with Sir William Stephenson, the Canadian millionaire who headed from New York, during the Second World War, all British secret service operations in North and South America.

Prisoner

The outline of Fleming's more clandestine career is discernible only against the pattern of Sir William Stephenson's.

Sir William, a founding child who never knew the identity of his mother and father, was reared in Winnipeg by foster parents named Stephenson.

During the First World War, Sir William, then a poor Royal Flying Corps pilot, was shot down and captured by the Germans. When he escaped from a POW camp, Sir William carried with him a novel German can-opener of the thumb-screw type that is now familiar in almost every home.

On reaching England Sir William discovered that the German inventor of this can-opener had patented it only in Turkey and Bulgaria, countries then allied with the Reich. Sir William thereupon smartly patented a copy of the can opener in every other civilized country.

Big Power

He became immensely rich and shortly after the First World War a tremendous power in the British steel industry.

During the late 20s and early 30s Sir William spent much time in Germany using his steel industry connections for the accumulation of industrial intelligence. This he passed through secret channels to the British government.

Sir William also supplied tidbits about wartime industrial trends in Germany to Sir Winston Churchill, who used them as the content of warning speeches in the House of Commons.

In the course of this work, Sir

Stephenson

William enlisted the assistance of Ian Fleming, whose journalistic duties afforded opportunities for asking many questions.

Fleming, who came from a rich, military English family, had been educated at Eton, Sandhurst and the Universities of Munich and Geneva. He was a tall, good-looking young man with considerable guile under the debonaire manner that endeared him to many influential Germans.

In 1933, Fleming quit journalism and left Berlin for London. Using the excuse of needing more money, he joined first the banking house of Cull and Company and, in 1935, the stockbroker firm of Rowe and Pitman.

Significant

It is significant, however, that both these enterprises had close associations with the New York banking house of Kuhn, Loeb and Company of which a senior partner was the late Sir William Wiseman.

During the First World War Sir William Wiseman had served as Britain's senior secret agent in North America and had been responsible for smashing von Rintelen's ring of German saboteurs operating against allied shipping in New York's harbor.

Shortly after the outbreak of the Second World War, Sir Winston Churchill appointed Sir William Stephenson to the duties in North America which had been carried out in the First World War by Sir William Wiseman.

About the same time Ian Fleming was appointed Personal Assistant to the Director of Naval Intelligence in Britain.

On frequent visits to New York during the war Fleming was in contact with both Sir William Stephenson and Sir William Wiseman.

Murders

One of the jobs which Fleming carried out before the United States entered the conflict was the liquidation of a number of German agents in New York.

For the sake of good diplomatic relations between Britain and the U.S. it is unlikely that details of these exploits will be made public for many years to come.

But I am told by other men who worked under Sir William Stephenson that, in New York, Fleming helped to organize the pushing of one German agent into the docks and the running down of another by a truck without incurring any charges in the criminal courts of the then neutral U.S.

Fleming also played an important rough and tumble in Britain's operations in South America against agents who were diverting industrial diamonds to Germany.

After the war, Fleming, still holding his rank of Commander in the Special Reserve of the Royal Navy, was appointed, much to the astonishment of London publishers, Foreign Manager of Kemsley (now Thomson) Newspapers Ltd.

The Blind

His journalistic background was widely regarded as too limited for such an important post. But it became clear as he built up an enormous organization of foreign correspondents all over the world, an organization far beyond the editorial requirements of even Britain's biggest newspaper chain, that other functions lay behind Fleming's job.

For two years after the war, when I was the Kemsley correspondent in Paris and nothing else, I saw a lot of Fleming. He used to come over from London about once a week and depart from the bureau on mysterious errands.

Traits

Even so he managed to fit in with me many Lucullan lunches at Le Coq Hardy, an old coaching inn on the outskirts of the city. It was during these feasts that detected in Fleming the traits that later made him so successful as a novelist.

He adored Le Coq Hardy not merely for the epicurean cuisine but for its history as a rendezvous for aristocrats who fled from the French Revolution with the help of the sort of British agents who inspired the Baroness Orczy's novel The Scarlet Pimpernel.

He talked amiably of his brother Peter Fleming who was then already famous as the author of travel books.

And he revealed his romantic nature by confiding in me his love for Lady Rothermere, then wife of Lord Rothermere, the owner of the Daily Mail.

It is a tribute to Fleming's ardor and adroitness as a wooer that he was able to make this beautiful woman his own wife after her divorce from Lord Rothermere in 1952.

Kept Touch

In 1959, when the strange, over-blown Kemsley foreign service began to deflate, and the first Bond novels began to reap fat royalties, Fleming quit journalism for the second time.

Until shortly before his death, however, Fleming paid frequent visits to the magnificent apartment on fashionable East 52nd St., New York, of Sir William Stephenson.

Fleming's home in the West Indies, Goldeneye, Oracabessa, Jamaica, stands near to Sir William's winter residence.

That both of them had retired from the British secret service—if such retirement is possible—must remain a matter for surmise. That Sir William augmented Fleming's wide knowledge of secret service techniques, and thus helped to enrich the Bond novels, is certain.

Muse Gets Assist

JACK SMITH

A week or two ago I mentioned having trouble with my first novel, Summer's End. I can't get past the first six words: "It was the end of summer. I've been stuck there since the summer I graduated from high school, what with the war and marriage and one disaster after another."

Now I have a letter from Irving Wallace, the author of The Chapman Report, saying I have wrecked his vacation. The letter was postmarked Juan-les-Pins, on the French Riviera. Wallace says he is there to do "research."

"I cannot stand things unfinished," he writes. "In spare moments I am always trying to complete the Unfinished Symphony or wind up the mystery of Edwin Drood. Now I have to contend with the five (he started me one) opening and promising words of your long-awaited novel, the electric first five words that read: 'It was the end of summer.'"

In the first place, Irving, you've got seven words there, not five, and you've added a "the." As it stands now, my book reads: "It was the end of summer." Not "the summer." But let's not be petty. We are working in the heat and light of creation.

"Reclining on the sand of Cannes and Juan-les-Pins," Wallace continues, "averting my eyes from bicklers and other diversions, I have been wondering how you intend to go on with your book . . ."

"At no cost to you, but . . . for my own peace of mind, I offer you several choices for the completion of that beginning."

He then suggests several beginnings, of which this is the first:

"It was the end of summer when his wife, whom he had buried beneath the gravel of the new freeway three months before, returned in time to attend his wedding."

Well, that's provocative enough, Irving. But I don't think I'd be getting married again right away. It's not in character.

I'm more intrigued with a suggestion based on my adventures in the merchant marine.

"It was the end of summer when the telephone rang, and the voice that he had known and dreaded in those secret merchant-marine years came softly over the phone, and his autumn of hell began."

Wallace says I'm welcome to the idea. "I am flattered," he says, "that you think that if I had had your merchant-marine background I would have gotten several best-sellers out of it. I assure you, I would have gotten seasick."

I like the merchant-marine idea. Especially that part about the "autumn of hell." In fact, I think I'll just change my title from Summer's End to Autumn of Hell. It's got more drama. Summer's End sounds like everything's all over; Autumn of Hell sounds like it's just beginning.

Yes, I think I see the beginning now: "His autumn of hell began when his wife, whom he had buried beneath the gravel of the new freeway . . ."

Of course I'll have to go to the French Riviera to do the research.

Heading for Vancouver

Sudbury Towing Crippled Vessel

Sudbury II is heading back to B.C. waters after taking the 15,000-ton Greek freighter Atlantic Sun in tow ahead of schedule. A spokesman for Island Tug & Barge Ltd. said contact was made before 9 p.m. Thursday. The Greek ship lost her propeller a week ago near the crossing of the International Date Line and the 49th parallel. A sister ship, the Atlantic Grace, went to her rescue and stayed until another, the Atlantic Governor, arrived and started to tow the powerless ship toward the B.C. coast. They had covered more than 700 miles when Sudbury II picked up her tow. The deepest tug left Victoria Saturday and will tow the Atlantic Sun to Vancouver for repairs.

PNE Costs Millions

VANCOUVER (CP)—The 1964 Pacific National Exhibition opens Saturday as a $1,121,000 investment by the exhibition itself and as a $6,000,000-plus proposition for businessmen.

Concessionaires and livestock exhibitors will spend much of that $6,000,000 with the prospect of a quick return. Some 350 commercial exhibitors will spend the rest with the prospect of a longer wait to be paid back.

They gamble that the money spent on displays will pay off in impact on fair-goers. Most of the exhibitors now turn to professionals for the design and fabrication of these exhibits, and the outfit chosen most often is Challer Display Associates Ltd.

Challer, biggest display firm west of Toronto, is cornering business at the PNE, and at "A" circuit exhibitions on the Prairies as the biggest single part of work volume growing at about 10 per cent a year.

More than 125 contracts for this year's PNE will mean about $80,000 in volume to the company. Other work on the exhibition grounds for trade fairs and annual shows run the total to $150,000. Fabrication and leasing of displays to the PNE, other exhibitions and conventions account for rental income of $130,000 a year.

Test Station Still Going Strong

Business is still brisk at the voluntary car testing station on the curling rink parking lot on Quadra, and cars are going through the safety test line at the rate of 17 an hour.

There was a constant stream of cars from 1 p.m. when the station opened Thursday, and motorists were willing to line up for two-and-a-half hours to have their vehicles checked. Faulty lights were the main reasons for rejecting cars, one tester said.

The station will open from noon to 6 p.m. tonight, and from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., Saturday. Next week the mobile station moves to the Safeway lot on Quadra.

Who's Got Beatles? Hotel Owners Ask

VANCOUVER (UPI)—Greater Vancouver hotel owners are asking: "Beatles, Beatles, who's got the Beatles?"

No one appears to know where Britain's travelling singers will stay when they arrive here Saturday for a one-night show.

Hotels in Vancouver, Burnaby, Richmond and New Westminster are in the running.

However, several are happily out of the running.

Vancouver's posh Bayshore Inn said several months ago it was booked up, a polite but firm refusal.

Julius Balshine of the Royal Towers Hotel in New Westminster was more emphatic.

"I've told every desk clerk to refuse to let them onto the premises—the New Westminster police couldn't handle it and we don't want them," he said.

While the faces of teen-age girls get brighter, the face of promoters at the Pacific National Exhibition gets grimmer. The reason is the hefty surplus of 14,000 tickets for the one-night performance.

So far, ticket sales total some 12,000, but officials hope sales at the door plus radio giveaways will take up the surplus.

Four teen-agers ordered a four-foot-high Oakpit Eskimo owl as a gift to the Beatles. When it arrived, enclosed was a bill for $130. Stuck with the bill, they placed the owl in a shop window in West Vancouver, hoping someone would drop money in a receptacle to help pay for it. Donations so far total $10.

Meanwhile, a 300-man security force was being assembled by the Vancouver police department to safeguard the British singers when they arrive.

Kids Gambol At Vegas

LAS VEGAS (UPI)—Seven thousand yelping, sometimes sweltering teen-agers turned out Thursday to hear the Beatles perform — many at scalper prices — while their blase parents retreated to air-conditioned gambling casinos.

The first of two performances at the Convention Centre was almost an hour late. Hundreds of youngsters stood in 100-degree heat outside the hotel for four hours or more, waiting for a glimpse of the mop-haired singers.

Gilbey's explain how to trim a gin and bitter lemon

Some gins have rather strong flavouring. Others are utterly tasteless. Gilbey's London Dry has a perfect balance for the novel gin and bitter lemon. A dry flavour that has been the international favourite since 1873. Quite a long time.

A lemon slice trims a gin and bitter lemon to perfection. Either on the edge of your glass or immersed.

Behind Closed Door

Muzzled MLAs Walk Out

Two Social Credit MLAs walked out of Thursday's mini-metro study meeting, about half an hour after it had started—apparently angered because they were to be muzzled.

Victoria MLA Waldo Skillings was first to leave the conference room, followed seconds later by Saanich MLA John Tisdalle. Esquimalt MLA Herbert Bruch stayed on.

Asked why he left, Mr. Tisdalle said municipal and unorganized representatives indicated they felt MLAs should not have a voice, and should only attend as observers.

"There was no vote. It was just indicated by several members and the minister (Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell) made that ruling," complained Mr. Tisdalle.

"There is little purpose for a man to sit there if he can't interject, interview and cross-examine," he said.

"No comment," said Mr. Skillings when asked what happened at the meeting. "No comment whatsoever," he added.

"There was a ruling the press would not be admitted. There was no vote. The chairman ruled. I had no choice. I didn't agree with the ruling, but I wasn't allowed a voice," complained Mr. Tisdalle.

He said the meetings were of a simple exploratory nature and he thought they should have as much light as possible.

"I want the press in whether it is biased or opinionated, or not. If I have something to say, I will say it openly, even if the others want to go behind in-camera sessions," Mr. Tisdalle said.

'I Like It Wide Open'

"I like it wide open. I think its success will be guaranteed only by full and comprehensive understanding."

Prior to the meeting, Mr. Campbell said that he would bring up the question of admitting the press to delegates and that word would be sent to the corridor where reporters were waiting.

"You can understand," said the minister, "that if legislation is formulated at this or a subsequent meeting that I would be in a rather awkward position if it got to the public before the legislature."

But political observers noted that during legislative sessions committees of MLAs are set up to study specific problems leading to legislation. The press is admitted to the committee meetings and only excluded from the one or two meetings where the actual legislation is framed.

Mr. Campbell said that he believed that presence of reporters might inhibit discussion in the early stages of discussion.

"I know, of course, that these people will be reporting back. It is comparatively simple in the case of municipal councils but rather more difficult in the case of rural delegates."

It was learned that Mr. Skillings and Mr. Tisdalle left after discussion of their function at the meeting, and when it had been decided that they would have no voice in the meetings but would merely act as observers.

Firmly Ushered Out

After delegates assembled, photographs were allowed in the caucus room to take pictures of the group. Then they, and reporters, were gently but firmly ushered out and the door, with its "no admittance" sign, closed.

New Democratic Party leader Robert Strachan appeared briefly before the meeting to greet delegates and then left.

"Of course I think this meeting should be public," he said when asked what he thought. "This is a public matter and the people should be fully informed of what is going on."

Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell said "We are working in the area of legislation, and it is normal procedure for the legislature to get it first."

"The question of whether or not the press would be admitted was not put to a vote, although there was some discussion."

Reeve Alfred Wurtele of Esquimalt said: "The minister made the point that it was very much legislative work, even though we have no power of making a final decision, and he said that he would take the responsibility for excluding the press."

"As reeve of Esquimalt I can go along with this; I would like to talk with my council first. There was no vote taken."

William Reader, Colwood, said that "the matter was discussed, and some were against it and some were for it, but there was no vote. The minister just made the ruling."

By IAN SMITH

Cautious optimism seemed to be the keynote Thursday as the mini-metro study group held its first meeting behind closed doors at the legislative buildings.

Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell, who originally proposed the idea of a joint services board, said that the delegates from south Vancouver Island areas had agreed in principle to a basic approach.

"Now we want to fit the financial flesh to the bare bones of the idea," he said.

MEETING SEPT. 2

He indicated that the group would start studying possible financial setup at the next meeting, which was set for 2 p.m. Sept. 2.

Mr. Campbell said that the meeting "went well, in the sense that some people seemed to have misconceptions that were cleared up."

NO PAT ANSWER

"For instance, a few delegates thought that we had some pat answers ready, when of course we didn't. We're here to find those answers."

Nevertheless, Mr. Campbell had done some major preparation for the meeting. He had a seven-page mimeographed proposal ready for the perusal of the delegates.

NINE-ITEM LIST

The proposal took the form of a nine-item list of possible functions of the board, worked out under deputy minister J. E. Brown by representatives of the provincial and municipal governments since Mr. Campbell first announced the mini-metro scheme.

Mr. Campbell indicated that the study group accepted the proposals "in principle."

PROPOSED PLAN

Under the plan advanced, the mini-metro board would deal with regional planning, public health, hospitals, water, waste disposal, sewage disposal, air pollution, regional parks, library and welfare facilities.

Among the proposals presented Thursday was one that the boundaries of the mini-metro region should include all of school districts 61 and 63, and that portion of district 62 lying southeast of the northwest boundaries of the Otter and Goldstream Land Districts and east of Finlayson Arm.

REPRESENTATION

It was felt that the members of the board should represent the present six municipalities and the six special areas of North Saanich, View Royal, Langford, Colwood, Metchosis and Sooke.

It was suggested that the elected representatives from the unorganized areas should hold office for two years, but no clear opinion was expressed by Mr. Brown's committee on the length of office for other representatives.

VOTING ISSUE

It was generally agreed by Mr. Brown's group that no representative should have more than five votes and that the representatives of municipalities with more than one vote should have equal weight, although a senior delegate might be assigned the extra vote or votes where equal distribution was not possible.

SUBSTITUTES

One of the most important decisions reached was that a representative would be able to appoint someone to represent him if he were unable to attend a meeting. This seemed to overcome the objections that many members of the group had expressed about the lack of night meetings.

Mayor R. B. Wilson called the first meeting "a very good beginning; these are good starting points," and other delegates seemed to concur.

'VERY SATISFIED'

Ralph Willing of Langford said, "I was very satisfied with the way the meetings have gone to date. I've always been in favor of this in principle, but of course we must get into the financial aspects before we can say for certain."

William Reader, Colwood, called it "a rather frank discussion of a few of the problems we intend to discuss. We'll just have to wait and see what the next meetings bring."

Closed by Police

Young Shoeshiners Out of Business

Two Victoria shoe-shine girls have been forced by police to close down their Causeway enterprise.

The Oak Bay secondary students—Diane Stewart, 14, of 1416 Saint David and Liz Brimacombe, 16, of 850 Victoria Avenue—set up a shoe-shine service Tuesday on the Causeway across the road from the legislative buildings.

At 25 cents for men and 15 cents for ladies, about 30 sets of shoes had been shined on each of Tuesday and Wednesday. Ten pairs of shoes had been shined by Thursday noon when a policeman came along to say the business would have to be closed up. No licence.

Diane and Liz found out at city hall a licence would cost $10.

"We don't want to spend that much money to stay in business; we go back to school soon, anyway," said Diane.

She plans on sending a letter to the mayor asking that city council give them special dispensation to operate their shoe shine stand until school starts.

The girls are not bitter. They said, "The policeman was very polite, very nice about it."

Pay Dirt in Basement

Boys Dig Up $1,150 But Whose Is It?

By BOB FETHICK

A Saanich youth found an easy way to dig up $1,150 Thursday—he used a shovel.

But now the Saanich police are faced with a problem. If they can find the person who buried it does he get it, does the finder get it or does the owner of the property get it? The best police can offer at the moment is that they are still investigating.

It began in the basement of a house at 428 Dupplin, which was owned by Mrs. Isabel Page, 572 John.

She hired Joseph Johnson, of 488 Dupplin to dig out

a part of the basement floor to take an oil tank.

He hit pay dirt at 11:50 a.m. Thursday — five $100 bills, three $50 bills, 20 $20 bills and 10 $10 bills.

The bills ranged from 1935 to 1937 and were wrapped in a piece of stainless steel. Joseph took the money home to his mother who phoned Saanich police.

Then Mrs. Page phoned police to find out about ownership.

DON PRESENT

He said his son, Jim, 14, was there when the money was found.

"I have spoken to my lawyer about it," he added.

Asked how he would feel about receiving $1,150 he pointed out "it won't be mine it will be my wife's."

Ten Years of Public Service Here

Health Director Retiring

By A. H. MURPHY

Dr. Elizabeth Mahaffy will retire at the end of August after 19 years of public health service in this area.

She has held her present post as school health services director for the past three years and prior to that she was head of the Metropolitan Board of Health for seven years.

After that, says Dr. Mahaffy, "I will travel—just where I haven't yet decided."

After a period of travel, the tiny woman with the bright, intelligent face will probably settle in Alberta.

"I love Victoria and have spent a good part of my life here," she says, "but the climate just does not agree with me I'm afraid."

Daughter of a judge, Dr. Mahaffy went to school in Red Deer, Alberta. She attended University of Alberta, graduated in medicine and interned at Cedars of Lebanon Hospital, Los Angeles, after which she joined the Los Angeles city maternity service.

Her girlhood dreams of India became a reality when she joined the Women's Christian Medical College in the Punjab.

Dr. Mahaffy was home on leave when the Second World War broke out. She joined the RCAF, one of only 16 women doctors in the service.

Out of the RCAF in 1945 she came to Victoria and practised here for a time. In November, 1948, she joined the city's public health service. Three months later she became assistant MOH in charge of schools.

After post-graduate work at the University of California, Dr. Mahaffy was confirmed as medical health officer in Sept., 1955.

This post Dr. Mahaffy held until the Metropolitan Board of Health was formed in 1961. After her resignation from this post she became director of school health services.

Overload Brings Candlelight

It was dinner by candlelight Thursday night for crowds at the Oak Bay Marina—for about 15 minutes anyway.

Manager Robert Wright said an overload somewhere in the electrical system brought on the blackout just before 8:30 p.m. There was no panic even though coffee shop, dining room and docks were packed with people.

Victoria Club Requests Wider Divorce Grounds

WINNIPEG (CP)—The Canadian Federation of University Women Wednesday called on the federal government to expand grounds for divorce in Canada.

The CFUW triennial conference here passed a resolution asking that courts in provinces and territories that desire it be able to grant divorces on grounds of cruelty, desertion without cause for three years, or insanity not cured after five years' treatment.

The Victoria University Women's Club, in submitting the resolution, called present divorce laws in Canada "outdated and inadequate to our present society."

Existing laws, the club said, lead to the commission of fraud and perjury in the courts.

The resolution also asked the government to restrict divorces during the first three years of a marriage to cases of exceptional hardship.

The club said that present laws allow a divorce to be granted whether or not any effort has been made to prevent a marriage from breaking up.

A second part of the resolution asked member clubs to study marriage laws with the idea of suggesting changes that would discourage hasty, ill-considered marriages and establishing uniform marriage laws across Canada.

The Victoria resolution said that under existing laws marriage may be entered into too lightly or too early. The club also said the mobility of Canada's population makes greater uniformity of marriage laws desirable.

Litter Bags Distributed

The Jaycees have been busy with bags lately—litter bags. The members of the Junior Chamber of Commerce have distributed over 80,000 bags throughout the Victoria area through the co-operation of motels, service stations and stores.

They have also enlisted the services of Miss Victoria, Linda Gower, to distribute the litter bags to incoming tourists.

The Victoria Jaycees hope to distribute 100,000 bags in all, and this is only one-fifth of the total that will be given away throughout B.C. and the Yukon.

The litter containers have a picture of a "garbage goblin" and are colored green and orange.

Grandmother's Ring For 'Something Old'

An heirloom ring belonging to her grandmother was the "something old" worn by Beverly Rose McLaughlin when she became the bride of Mr. Cecil Lorne Reay in Oak Bay United Church.

Her exquisite floor-length gown of white organza was enhanced with a lace bodice, lily-point sleeves and a matching lace train. A pearl coronet held her circular veil of silk illusion net and she carried a cascade of Rapture roses and stephanotis.

Rev. A. Calder heard the vows of the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles McLaughlin, 2801 Dufferin Avenue, and the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Reay of Red Deer, Alta. Church was decorated with candelabra and white gladioli.

Miss Shirley Naylor sang "The Lord's Prayer" and "O Perfect Love."

Identical bell-skirted gowns of aqua crystal charm and matching pearl-trimmed tiaras were worn by maid of honor, Miss Barbara Gradal, Edmonton; bridesmaid, Mrs. Murray McLaughlin, Fort William, Ont.; and bridesmaid, Miss Ann Stott. A pale pink rose centred their colonial bouquets of white carnations.

Mr. Thomas Towers was best man and ushering guests were Mr. Murray McLaughlin and Mr. William Munroe.

A silver vase held the roses, heather and stephanotis that topped the three-tier wedding cake on the head table when guests gathered for a reception in the George Gardiner Hall.

Gladioli decorated the room. Mr. William Cathro proposed the toast to the bride, and Miss Gwen Shortt was in charge of the guest book.

Leaving on a honeymoon tour on Vancouver Island, the bride wore a crystal blue wool sheath dress, matching pillbox hat and accessories, topped with a beige coat.

The newlyweds will make their home at Red Deer.

Vaux-Adams

Mainland Wedding of Interest

Of wide interest is news of the marriage of Beverly Lynn Adams, daughter of Rear-Admiral and Mrs. Kenneth Frederick Adams, Vancouver, formerly of Victoria, and granddaughter of Mrs. Walter Adams, Victoria, and Mr. John Michael Vaux, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert John Vaux, Vancouver.

Very Rev. Dean Northcote Burke officiated at the Saturday afternoon ceremony in Christ Church Cathedral, Vancouver.

A summer bower in the shadowed nave of the Cathedral set the theme for one of the season's loveliest weddings. Two seven-foot pyramid trees, shimmering white, marked the chancel rail, and white blossoms were on the altar while pews were marked by white lilies.

In keeping with the all-white summer backdrop was the bride's exquisite gown of white ottoman silk with Alencon lace and seed pearls alternating the neckline and sleeves. The sweeping skirt ended in a chapel train and was misted by clouds of French illusion veiling extending in a pouff to a cathedral train. It was held in place by a headpiece of bridal tulle roses. The bride carried an ivory prayer book, topped by Tropicana roses and stephanotis.

Echoing the summertime mood were the attendants' gowns of pink champagne peau de sole, with over-blouses of misty chiffon edged in hand-made flowers. They carried pompom bouquets of Tropicana roses and carnations with the sunset hue of the flowers repeated in back of the head clusters.

Mrs. Donald Brown was a maid of honor for her sister. Bridesmaids were the Misses Nancy McPhee, cousin of the bride, Victoria, Penny Terrator, Cobble Hill, and Judi Fox, another of the bride's cousins, and Joan Weld.

Mr. Michael Horsey was best man. Ushering guests were Mr. Ted Chamberlain, Mr. Michael Hunter, Mr. John MacMillan and Mr. Richard Simeon.

The wedding theme was carried out in the decorations at Capilano Golf Course for the reception and a confetti tree marked the entrance to the club. Departing from custom, there were two wedding cakes, with the groom's served in a flower-decorated white garden cart, and passed out among the guests. The bride cut her cake with her father's naval sword. Mr. Edward F. Fox proposed the toast to his niece.

On return from their honeymoon at Jasper Mr. and Mrs. Vaux will make their home in West Vancouver.

Victorians attending the wedding were Mr. Clifford Adams, Cmdr. and Mrs. Ian McPhee, and Mrs. Edith Robertson.

Also in Vancouver for the wedding were Dr. and Mrs. David Reid of Duncan.

After the reception, Mr. and Mrs. Roland Horsey entertained for family and close friends. The following day Mr. and Mrs. Fox invited the wedding families to their Hood Point home.

Mary Anna Shaw, daughter of Lord and Lady Kilbrandon of Edinburgh, who has been a guest in the Fox home, was also present. Miss Shaw will come to Victoria and will be the house guest of Mrs. Fox's brother, Mr. Clifford Adams. She has been touring Canada visiting family members.

Mr. and Mrs. Townsend Married in St. Mary's

Pink and white gladiolus decorated St. Mary's Church, Oak Bay, for the pretty summer ceremony uniting in marriage Doreen Ann Lewis and William Adrian Townsend.

Canon Hyslop Jones performed the double-ring ceremony for the daughter of Mrs. Bernard A. Lewis, 2175 Pentland Road, and the late Mr. Lewis, and the son of Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Townsend of Duncan.

Given in marriage by her uncle, Mr. Leonard Lambert, the bride was radiant in a floor-length gown of white nylon organza over taffeta enhanced with charmingly lace inserts in the bodice and skirt. The fitted bodice of matching lace was embroidered with iridescent sequins. The four-tiered veil of sheer nylon net misted to chapel length from a coronet of iridescent sequins and seed pearls. Pink and white roses and white beater were in her bridal bouquet.

Maid of honor Miss Pat Edge was in a turquoise nylon organza over taffeta gown with bouffant skirt and shirred bodice. She wore a flowered and net hat entore and carried pink carnations.

Nieces of the groom, Cindy Smith as flower girl was in a pink nylon organza over taffeta frock enhanced with lace and satin bows. She wore a headband of pink feathered carnations and carried a basket of same flowers.

Mrs. A. R. Millham and her mother, Mrs. G. Sadler, entertained at a miscellaneous shower at the latter's Phillipa Place home Wednesday evening in honor of Miss Janet Sinclair, September bride-elect.

Following an evening of games Mrs. J. Connor assisted at the tea table, which was centred with a bride doll flanked on either side with tall pink tapers, set in pink and white roses.

Among those present were Mrs. T. A. Blackwood, Mrs. H. Boland, Mrs. E. Connor, Mrs. H. Dye, Mrs. E. W. Green, Mrs. J. S. Houston, Mrs. D. Sheldrick, Mrs. W. Shpruk, Mrs. R. Sinclair, Mrs. J. Wilgenhof, and the Misses Anne Currie, Myrna Erout, Diane Hammond and Bessie Musselwhite.

Financial Aid For Students

NANAIMO — Trustees have approved in principle the waiving of textbook rental, school examination, and similar fees to students whose parents are on welfare. The matter was referred to the policy file committee.

Trustees indicated they are no longer interested in the possible purchase of a used bookmobile, as suggested by the Vancouver Island Regional Library.

A reception for new teachers will be held Sept. 9.

FULFORD — Mr. and Mrs. Jack Lyngard left Salt Spring Island en route to Halifax, where Mr. Lyngard will be posted with the navy on Sept. 1 for two years.

The Lyngards are visiting the senior Lyngards in Alberta, and a brother in Ontario en route to the Maritimes.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: I have a problem which I'm sure you can't solve, but I am going to tell you about it just to get it off my chest.

My problem is that I'm hooked on your column. Sometimes when you hand out that high-sounding advice I get so mad at you I swear I'll never read you again as long as I live.

The next day I find myself sneaking back to see what you have to say.

Recently you gave some kiddy reply to a college boy who was telling you the way it is now, Granny. You came out four-square for chastity, purity and virginity. I decided then and there that Old Lady Landers was getting senile and I was through wasting my time reading your claptrap.

The next morning I did NOT read your column. When I got to work everybody was talking about the letters from all those nutty people who wrote in to tell Ben's wife how to cure the rash on her hands.

I felt like a yokel, an ignorant—completely out of it. So, here I am back disagreeing with you one-third of the time. Hating you and loving you—HOPELESSLY ADDICTED.

Dear Addicted: Welcome back. And I hope you never manage to kick the habit.

Dear Ann Landers: I own a small business and work six days a week from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. On Tuesdays and Fridays I have to get my own supper because my wife has choir practice and Ladies' Aid.

I give my wife $300 a month for the table and spending money. Whenever she needs more she gets it. In return this is what she does: she cleans the icebox once in four months. The house looks like a pigpen until I scream about it and then she rearranges the dirt. If a guest should accidentally open

Nudists Agin It

AURORA, Ont. (CP)—Nudists attending the 10th annual Eastern Canadian Sunbathing Association weekend near this town north of Toronto were asked by a reporter what they think of topless bathing suits for women. "They're obscene," said a blonde nudist. "People like that are trying to be sexy. Total nudity is so natural."

letter so I can shove it under hers for a change. — NEW ROCHELLE

Dear New: Showing the column under your wife's nose will not help. May I make a more practical suggestion. Hire a cleaning woman to come in twice a week and deduct the cost from that $200 monthly allowance.

Yelling and screaming is no substitute for positive action.

TV TALK

By BRUCE LOWTHER

The biggest pay-television outfit in the U.S. has made a key deal for movies, a deal which may have far-reaching effects on movie use by both pay-TV and

"free" television.

Subscription Television Inc., which has the Los Angeles pay-TV market, has signed a deal with United Artists whereby it will get

UA movies nine months after their theatrical release is over. And UA guarantees the movies won't go to free television for the year that pay-TV has them.

Titles in the first package are Lilies of the Field, Dr. No, Irma La Douce, The Great

Escape, Toys in the Attic and Two for the Doll.

Subscription Television may have acted because of a survey which showed its Los Angeles viewer drawing few viewers except for Dodge home games, which it has exclusively.

Meanwhile, new pay-TV franchises have been granted for Miami, Atlanta, Houston and Dallas.

In other words, it's getting closer—and it even looks now as if pay-TV will be firmly established before color

TV. Who would have thought that only five years ago?

Winning Contract

By HOWARD SCHENKEN and RICHARD L. FREY

Although many contracts appear to depend on a two-way finesse for the trump queen, the finesse is rarely a pure guess. Nearly always there is a good reason to take the finesse one way rather than the other. This was so on today's hand.

Scientific bidders would respond one diamond on the South hand, but we sympathize with the bid actually made. With a hand that is clearly going to game, there can be an advantage to concealing a major suit.

Declarer was not displeased when West led the heart deuce, since he thought this improved his chances of two tricks in the suit. Dummy played low, the queen won and the diamond ten came back. Declarer won with the diamond ace and took an unlikely position when he crossed to the trump ace and finessed the ten on the way back. Now West added to declarer's troubles by leading the heart four.

South took stock. He had already lost two tricks and was certain to lose a diamond. He must, therefore, avoid the loss of a club. There were two possible ways to achieve this: by raking another heart finesse and dumping a club on the heart ace, or by taking the heart ace now and playing for a 3-3 diamond break. Unfortunately West's heart return was a pistol at declarer's head—he had to make his decision now, and could not take both chances.

Declarer took his second unlikely position when he finessed the heart jack. This cost him the contract, for if he had put up the ace and banked on the diamonds, he'd have been home. Do you see where he went astray? That trump finesse was not a blind guess. South should have led the trump king first; then finessed dummy's jack. If this lost to the queen, the fact that East could not lead hearts would preserve all declarer's chances. He could win the return, draw a third round of trumps and concede a diamond. If diamonds broke badly, the heart finesse could then be tried.

Mother's Footsteps

Following in her mother's footsteps is 4½-year-old Joanne Lemoine, youngest member of the Flying Lemoines, family of high-wire artists now performing at Vancouver Island Exhibition in Nanaimo. Everyone in family of 11 has part in the act. Shown with Joanne is her mother, Maria. — (Agnes Flett)

Bullets in Berlin

U.S. Car Target Of Russian

BERLIN (UPI) — A Russian sentry fired 10 shots from a sub-machinegun at a U.S. army car on an East Berlin patrol Sunday night, and the United States warned Thursday the incident was dangerous, unjustified and could lead to extremely serious consequences.

An American spokesman said a sentry on a suburban street outside a Soviet barracks fired two blasts from about 400 yards distance but did not hit the sedan or its four occupants, all enlisted men.

TWO PROTESTS

The warnings to the Soviet Union were made in two protests lodged Wednesday and announced Thursday.

American officials could give no explanation for the incident. They were puzzled because the Russians in recent months have been co-operative, speedily passing convoys to and from Berlin.

TO RED COMMANDER

Both the army and the U.S. embassy in West Germany protested.

Gen. Paul Freeman, commander of the U.S. army in Europe, protested to Gen. Ivan Jakubovsky, commander of the Soviet occupation forces in East Germany.

Martin Hillenbrand, charge d'affaires at the U.S. embassy in Bonn, protested to Piotr Abramov, Soviet ambassador to East Germany.

The protests were delivered Wednesday. The Russians received the protests without giving any explanation or reaction, informed sources said.

Dosco

Bid

Reported

HALIFAX (UPI) — Unconfirmed reports said Thursday a syndicate of Quebec businessmen has made a $50,000,000 bid to purchase the Nova Scotia-based Dominion Coal and Steel Corporation.

The bid was said to have been made a month ago to the Hawker Siddeley group, DOSCO's parent company.

The syndicate, backed by the Quebec government, reportedly offered to pay $27 per share for DOSCO's controlling interest. As word leaked to the Montreal stock exchange yesterday, DOSCO stock rose from $16.25 to $17.00.

Reason for the offer was given as Quebec's desire for a fully integrated steel mill in the province.

A Hawker Siddeley spokesman in London denied any information on the proposal.

Peking Summit To Rival Russia's

TOKYO (AP)—Radio Peking hinted Thursday that pro-Chinese Communist parties may hold a separate conference to counter the Moscow - proposed world showdown meeting on the Soviet-Chinese dispute.

The hint was contained in the broadcast of a resolution of the New Zealand Communist Party, which fully supported Peking's views and opposed an early world Communist meeting.

Warship Plans Shoot Tuesday

HMCS Saskatchewan will conduct a firing exercise from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Tuesday off Sheringham Point, 15 miles west of Sooke Harbor in the Strait of Juan de Fuca.

Eighteen Starters

Lake Beats Lumsden

ST. CATHARINES, Ont. (CP) — Cliff Lumsden, 33, of Toronto was hauled from Lake Ontario shortly after 1 a.m. today, the seventh contestant to withdraw from the 32-mile St. Catharines-to-Toronto marathon swim. He was suffering from cramps and exhaustion.

Eighteen swimmers started the race from here at 6 p.m. Thursday. Abdel Laif Abou Hef, 37, of Egypt, and Judith De Nys, 22, of Holland, were battling for the lead with the Egyptian major holding a slight edge after 11 miles.

The first-place finisher wins $7,000 and the first woman to reach the Toronto waterfront gets $1,500. Two other women are in the race besides Miss De Nys—Greta Anderson of Denmark and Mary Lou Whitwell of Ottawa. They are far behind the leaders. John Lacoursiere, 28, of Montreal, was the first to drop out of the Canadian National Exhibition-sponsored swim, nearly four hours after the swimmers left here. Claudia McPherson, 18, of St. James, Man., youngest in the race, withdrew a few minutes later. Jorge Mezzadra, 25, and Roberto Florencio, 23, both of Argentina, were pulled from the water an hour later. Kurt Plunk, 31, of Toronto and Roberto Horatio Reta Seery, 25, of Argentina, called it quits before midnight.

Strachan

Overdue Report Wanted

The Clyde report on B.C. expropriation laws, which has cost $40,000 already, is long overdue, said New Democratic Party Leader Robert Strachan on Thursday.

"I am only repeating what I said at the last session of the legislature—that the report is being held back at someone's suggestion," the opposition leader declared.

He said J. V. Clyde, chairman of the huge MacMillan, Bloedel and Powell River timber firm, was apparently waiting until after B.C. Hydro had taken all the land it needed for the Columbia River power project.

VITAL IMPORTANCE

"This is a matter of vital importance to the people affected by this power development," said Mr. Strachan, recalling that Mr. Clyde said the report would be made this spring and, on July 17, said it would follow in a month.

Commenting on Mr. Clyde's recent statement that the report would be submitted within a week or 10 days, Mr. Strachan said: "He has said that before."

TAKING LAND

It was still his opinion, said the NDP leader, that Mr. Clyde had received the suggestion that it would not suit the purposes of either the government or B.C. Hydro to have the report published before they had taken all the land they needed.

To bring the report in after the road and pipeline projects were pretty well completed was patently ridiculous, Mr. Strachan said.

For B.C.

Unitarian Council Formed

The formation of the British Columbia Unitarian Council was announced Thursday by council chairman Arthur Linnell of 144 Garner Crescent, Nanaimo.

The council is composed of representatives of the Unitarian churches in Victoria and Vancouver and the Fellowship of Nanaimo, Courtenay, Cowichan Valley and West Vancouver.

The B.C. council succeeds the Vancouver Island Unitarian Committee.

One of the projects with which the new council will be involved is a provincial Unitarian summer camp which will take place Sept. 5-7 at Thunderbird Camp, Glina Lake, Sooke.

Victoria representatives of the new organization are Pat Salmon and Mrs. Mira Yarwood. Other Island representatives are Mrs. James Lunan of Courtenay and Andrew McMorland of Duncan.

Safety Clinic Scheduled Next Month

A safety clinic on trenching and excavation will be held at the Public Library, 1313 Blanshard, Sept. 3, sponsored by the Greater Victoria municipalities and the Workers' Compensation Board.

Topics to be covered include legal and practical controls, job-fabricated shoring, shoring devices and methods of use, site management and job planning and direction.

About 100 municipal, construction and public utility supervisors are expected to attend.

A clinic will also be held in Kamloops Sept. 19 at the Stockmen's Hotel.

Union Waits Final Word

MIAMI BEACH (UPI)—Members of the Teamsters Union executive board said in a signed statement today they did not plan any action to remove president James R. Hoffa until his legal appeals of fraud convictions have run their course in the courts.

Hoffa, who said he was not consulted about the statement and did not ask for it, called it "positive, living proof that there is no dissension in this union."

Groos Not Apologizing for Stand on Ensign

OTTAWA (CP)—David Groos (L-Victoria) acknowledged in the Commons Thursday he had written replies to his constituents saying he would do everything possible to try to keep the Red Ensign flying as Canada's national flag.

Liberal party policy is the proposed maple leaf flag.

Mr. Groos made the acknowledgement after George Chatterton, Conservative MP from the neighboring riding of Esquimalt-Saanich, read letters Mr. Groos had written to his constituents earlier this year.

Deputy Speaker Lucien Lamoureux said he doubted the propriety of Mr. Chatterton reading letters written by another MP. But he admitted he had no authority for such a ruling.

He said Mr. Chatterton's reading of the letters wasn't in the spirit of debate.

Mr. Chatterton said he had authority from the recipients of Mr. Groos' letters to read them in the Commons.

He said he had read them to show that Mr. Groos and other Liberal MPs wouldn't be allowed to vote as they wished on the flag issue.

Mr. Groos said he has been a supporter of the Red Ensign and that he makes no apologies for this stand.

However, when the flag had become an issue he had seen the need of looking far beyond his own personal views, of taking a detached view.

He had been heartened by the reaction of his constituents.

He said Victorians have taken a tolerant, restrained and understanding approach to the flag issue and that his mail indicates they are changing their view on the flag.

GI, Three Officers Killed by Viet Cong

PHU TUC (UPI)—Three U.S. army officers and one American enlisted man were slain by Communist Viet Cong guerrillas in a battle near here, it was announced today.

The Americans were with government forces which traveled to the area when it was attacked in force by the guerrillas Thursday.

Earlier, Communist fighters had devastated a government outpost near this village in the Mekong Delta, killing seven Vietnamese and wounding 13.

Airborne government troops drove off the guerrillas, killing two and capturing five. An American helicopter participating in the relief operation was shot down. The crew escaped injury.

The Viet Cong, in battalion strength, launched the assault at 2:45 a.m., with heavy fire from 60 mm mortars.

Congo Forces Reinforced

LEOPOLDVILLE (AP)—Troop and ammunition reinforcements were rushed by air Thursday to Congolese forces losing ground in defending Bukavu from rebel hands. Three Americans were reported missing.

Radio messages from Bukavu's garrison of more than 800 soldiers said they had been pushed by the Communist-backed rebels back into the European quarter of Bukavu, the last important northeastern Congolese city still in government hands.

The U.S. Embassy in Leopoldville said no word had been received from Vice-Consul Lewis R. Macfarlane, 25, of Seattle, Wash., and two army officers attached to the U.S. military mission to the Congo. They are Col. William A. Dodds, 50, a counter-insurgency expert, and Lt. Col. Donald V. Rattan, 40, an Alexandria, Va., infantry officer.

Consul Richard Matherson of Fresno, Calif., and the other five members of his staff notified the embassy by radio that they had reached safety at Kamembe Airport, about three miles from Bukavu, in neighboring Rwanda Republic.

A radio operator in the Belgian Consulate at Bukavu said word that he was hit by a machine-gun bullet inside the consulate building, but not seriously wounded, and that another Belgian was killed in the attack.

After City Postal Stake-Out

RECOVERED: $89,723

By BOB PETHICK

A Saanich detective stake-out in the Victoria post office Thursday led to the recovery of $89,723 in certified cheques and post office money orders.

As a result of their investigation, Saanich detectives charged a 32-year-old mother of two with breaking and entering and theft and dealing in forged documents.

Saanich police had been working on the theft of $9,000 in money orders from the A & B Hardware, 650 West Burnside, which was broken into in March.

Bank Bill Stalled In House

OTTAWA (CP)—The Commons passed two private bills and gave second reading to a third Thursday, but the bill to incorporate the proposed Bank of Western Canada failed again to get through second reading in the weekly hour devoted to private bills.

Henri Latulippe (Creditiste-Comptons-Frontenac) held up the bill with a sweeping criticism of the Canadian banking system.

TIGHT HOLD
Chartered banks have such a tight hold on the country that average citizens have no room to breathe, he said. The trouble could not be corrected by establishing another.

Jack Horner (PC—Acadia) said the proposed bank is masquerading under its name. It would be more appropriate to call it the Bank of Eastern Canada since the control rested in the East.

The Commons gave second reading to a bill to incorporate the Laurentide Bank of Canada. There was no discussion.

It gave third and final reading to a bill allowing the Guarantee Company of North America to also use the name La Garantie, Compagnie d'assurance de l'Amerique du Nord.

Man Held In Prison 'Illegally'

VANCOUVER (CP)—Lawyer Gordon Dowding said Thursday he will proceed by habeas corpus in an attempt to obtain the release of a man found not guilty of attempted murder by reason of insanity and who he said now is being illegally held in prison.

Paul McCullagh was arrested after firing a rifle in a city cafe and was charged with attempted murder. A jury found him not guilty by reason of insanity Dec. 28, 1961.

Mr. Dowding said he was sent to Esmondale Mental Hospital but since then, by various orders-in-council, had been alternately held in Oakalla Prison and at the Chilliwack forest camp, operated by penal authorities.

'Yacht Missing—So Is Train Robber'

British Cargo Ferry Shows Up the Navy

LONDON (AP)—They called out the Royal Navy and the Royal Air Force Thursday to chase a stolen luxury yacht suspected of carrying one of the great train robbers who had just escaped from prison.

But a ferryboat beat the Royal Navy to the kill—and found only two boys who had escaped from a reform school.

An armed boarding party was assembled on the submarine HMS Russell, which had sped from her berth at Glasgow. A submarine was diverted from routine patrol. An admiral directed operations.

As they rushed toward the stolen yacht, in the Irish Sea, the Slieveve, a well-stained British railways cargo ferry, stumbled onto the yacht and drew alongside.

Two boys, aged 14 and 16, were taken off the yacht, the Wild Venture. Finally the Russell came up and took the stolen vessel in tow, 12 miles off Dublin.

The Slieveve, the Russell and the Wild Venture then began a triumphant procession back to Holyhead in north Wales, near the point where the yacht was stolen.

The train robber? Police were still looking for him.

Theft of the 75-ton yacht, valued by her owner at about $80,000, had all the earmarks of a professional job. Police immediately suspected it might be carrying Charles Frederick Wilson, who escaped from prison last week. Wilson had just started a 30-year term for his part in the $2,500,000 ($7,800,000) train robbery last year.

For Olympics

Satellite in Position

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) Syncom 3 Thursday received a firing command designed to station it high above the earth as the world's first truly stationary satellite. The U.S. Space Agency said it would be several hours before results of the firing are known.

The "Olympic Star" satellite, launched Wednesday, is intended to jockey into a hovering position high above the mid-Pacific Ocean where it would be able to televise the Olympic Games from Japan to North America.

As the satellite swept above Sumatra at 10:17 a.m. PDT Thursday, a station at Salisbury, Australia, beamed the firing signal. A space agency statement said a small rocket aboard Syncom 3 ignited as planned and burned for 19.6 seconds, the prescribed time.

The statement said preliminary data indicated the satellite was performing normally, but

"it would be a number of hours until it is known whether the satellite has indeed achieved the world's first truly stationary orbit."

The firing was to switch Syncom 3 from a wide-looping path ranging from 635 to 23,675 miles high into a circular stationary orbit in which both the high and low points would be about 22,300 miles up and the craft would hang over one spot of the earth permanently.

B.C. Socreds Charge

Rightists Use Thompson

VANCOUVER (CP)—The president of the British Columbia Social Credit League said Thursday there is growing disenchantment in B.C. party circles with the national leadership of Robert Thompson.

George Driediger said it is time Mr. Thompson publicly dissociated himself with what is termed, a right-wing movement that included Ron Gostick, head of the Christian Action Movement.

CLARIFY POSITION

Mr. Driediger, in an interview, said the party leader also should clarify his position toward federal Liberals.

The B.C. president said he will ask a league board meeting to demand such a statement from Mr. Thompson.

EMBARRASSMENT

"I am personally dissatisfied that some people have used Bob Thompson," he said, "and in the process have caused embarrassment to the B.C. Social Credit League."

He said at the present time "there is growing dissatisfaction with the way the party is being led."

SOCRED LITERATURE

In calling on Mr. Thompson to dissociate himself with the Christian Action Movement, Mr. Driediger was referring to the publication of CAM literature in the January issue of the Socred house organ Focus.

The national leader said at the time the literature was published without his knowledge.

RECURRING RUMORS

In seeking the party leader's status toward the Liberal Party, the B.C. president was referring to recurrent rumors that Mr. Thompson was about to move to the Liberal camp. Mr. Thompson Thursday branded the rumors as untrue.

Three in Row For Alouettes

MONTREAL — "Hang down your head, Jim Trimble" is a refrain that isn't now being heard any more in these parts.

Trimble's Montreal Alouettes, almost everybody's choice to bring up the rear in the Eastern Football Conference, remained as the only unbeaten and untied team in the Canadian Football League by outdefending Toronto Argonauts, 16-1.

It was the third straight win for Alouettes, and it put them two points ahead of Ottawa Rough Riders, upset in their opening game by Argos.

A defence which has now yielded but 14 points in three games in what is normally a high-scoring conference, again proved the difference. It decided the game in the third quarter, when Argos, trailing by 0-10, completely dominated play but had to settle for a single.

point—and that on a 22-yard punt by Dave Mann.

Jackie Parker, who rambled for 30 yards in an old-time run, spearheaded the attempted rally as Argos got a first down only seven yards out. But the Montreal defence piled up fullback Ron Hatcher on third down after George Hupley had managed live tough yards in two cracks.

Argos came right back but when rookie Sherman Lewis was jarred loose from the ball on the Montreal 18, the starch went out of the Toronto club.

But while their defence was brilliant—led by Ed Nickla, Harold Cooley, Dick Walton and Marv Luster—the Alouettes were no ball of fire on offence. Although they did dominate the first half, it was mainly because the Argos attack was even worse and the Montreal attack was practically non-existent in the final 30 minutes.

Main difference in statistics was the 141 yards in penalties taken by the thwarted Argos. It was a statistic which had Toronto coach Nobby Winkowski demanding the game films be reviewed by league commissioner G. Sydney Halter.

NOT MUCH
Alouettes got an unconverted touchdown on a two-yard plunge by Dave Hoppman in the 10th minute of play and a 20-yard field goal from Gino Beretta in the second quarter.

The other seven points were provided by the defensive team late in the fourth quarter, Larry Tomlinson picking off a pass as he cut in front of Hatcher and racing 45 yards into the end zone. Beretta converted.

Attendance for the game, which saw the winners with only 177 yards gained, was 22,436.

First downs: Toronto 10, Montreal 17.
Passing yards: 389, 118.

OUTDOORS

with Alec Merriman

There are 200 steelhead in Harris and Hemmingson Creeks now . . . all tagged fish.

The fish and game branch has set a fence across the San Juan River just below the Crossover and they are tagging every steelhead that comes up the river.

The tags are vari-colored and all are numbered. Fish and game officials request lucky anglers to phone them or send the tags back to them with information about where and when the fish was caught . . . at Fish and Game Branch, 325 Fort Street, Victoria, B.C., phone EV 2-6111, local 2410.

"It is important for management. We must have some measure of the exploitation of these fish," says chief fish biologist Stewart Smith. Big question is how many of the winter steelhead caught by anglers are actually mature summer runs.

So far it has been found that no summer runs continue up the San Juan. They all turn off at Harris Creek.

Alberni Inlet has moved into the fishing spotlight, with reports of some of the best and earliest tyee fishing in years.

Nahmint is coming on good. Gus Beurling, who operates the floating fishing resort, says Alaskan plugs, eight ounces of weight, 60 feet of line, has been the best combination, all though herring strip and plug-cut herring has been working well. Out of 15 boats out Wednesday morning, 10 returned with tyees.

Franklin River has been producing tyees, but China Creek has been off so far this year.

This season, for the first time in several years, there is good fishing off the Port Boathouse, right below the main street of Port Alberni.

Some observers believe that a combination of wet weather with lots of freshets and the prolonged shutdown of the pulp mill because of the strike has lessened the harbor pollution to such an extent that the fish are returning to their old spots.

We haven't made a personal on-the-spot check yet, but our information from MacMillan, Bloedel and Powell River Co. officials is not encouraging to those who would like to camp along Alberni Inlet, somewhere close to the fishing grounds.

No overnight stopping is allowed along the tree farm road of MacMillan.

China Creek, which used to be a favorite takeoff point for Alberni Inlet fishing, is gated and will remain so until a public park is developed there on land donated by MacMillan.

Franklin River Camp A is gated. No public camping or boat launching there.

There are boat launching spots at Sarita, which is closer to Barkley Sound fishing which is reported fair for coho, than it is to Nahmint fishing. But, there is no overnight camping at Sarita.

You can camp at Pachena Beach, which is on the Pacific, a long way from comfortable fishing spots.

Best bet for tyee fishing would be to either stay at Nahmint Lodge or put your boat in at the Port Alberni ramp and travel down the Inlet for fishing, 14 miles to Nahmint, a little less to Franklin River. There are spots you could camp along the Inlet, reached only by boat.

We used to like to camp on the shore of Sproat Lake, but now you have to camp across the road, as Sproat Lake shores are for picnicking only. But it is a nice 50-unit provincial campsite across the road from the lake, seven or eight miles from Port Alberni. There are plenty of private accommodation in the Albernis.

Gold River tyee fishing was hot on the weekend. You can camp at Strathcona Lodge tent camp at Gold River if you make prior arrangements with the lodge at Buttle Lake. Anglers are camping under crowded conditions in the parking lot outside townsite gates. Otherwise it is an in and out proposition, with nearest camping area in Strathcona Park, along the road, and there are absolutely no facilities.

The road is open in non-logging-operation hours.

They are getting a few tyees each day at Campbell River, but the big run is yet to come. Commercial netters report it is in Johnstone Strait. One seiner netted 30 tyee Wednesday. With a five-day netting rest started Wednesday some tyee should move by. Coho fishing has fallen off, but there are still plenty of fish around for those who know how to catch them.

Fish are being taken at every fishing spot on the island, but it isn't really spectacular anywhere just now.

White Sox Overtake Orioles

Chicago White Sox made it all the way back yesterday and San Francisco Giants and New York Yankees, pre-season favorites for a world series meeting, had the bottom almost drop out of their market.

Leading the American League in June as they prepared to meet the Yankees nine times in 11 days, the White Sox were left for dead when they lost all nine games. At the end of the month they were six games out of the lead and baseball fans were wondering whether or not Baltimore Orioles could handle the mighty Yankees.

The Orioles are still answering "yes" to that one, but now the question is: "Can they handle the White Sox?"

An answer should be provided in the next 10 days. The Orioles and White Sox start a four-game series in Chicago tonight, then play another four-game set in Baltimore next weekend.

They start tonight with Chicago ahead by half a game. The White Sox got to the top yesterday, celebrating manager Al Lopez' 56th birthday with a 5-0 win which gave them a sweep of their last (four-game) series with the Yankees and their sixth win in the last eight games against the champions after losing the first 10.

Boston Red Sox, meanwhile, provided the needed assist by downing the Orioles, 4-3, for the second day in a row.

The desperate Yankees started hip-sore Whitey Ford, who had shut out the White Sox four times in a row this season. The White Sox got to him for two second-inning runs to end his hex at 46 consecutive scoreless innings, 32 of them this year.

It was more than was needed for John Buzhardt. The big right-hander scattered seven hits for a 5-0 shutout which was his 10th win of the season and the fifth of his lifetime without defeat against the Yanks.

Orioles lost more than the lead. Boog Powell, second in the league in home runs with 31, fractured his left wrist after flipped the instrument into the air toward the manager as if to give it to him. Berra angrily swatted it with his right hand, and it bounced off Pettitte's right knee, cutting it, but not badly.

"Why are you getting on me," Linz asked Berra. "I give 100 per cent out on the field. I try to win. I should be allowed to do what I want off the field."

Berra replied: "Play it in your room."

Berra also was overheard telling Linz: "I'll take care of you."

Berra, in his first year as manager, then returned to his seat, bringing on silence. Yankee coach Frank Crosetti said later the incident was the worst he has seen in his 33 years with the team.

Shamrocks Routed, 12-4 —It's Tonight or Else

NEW WESTMINSTER (Special)—Victoria Shamrocks 'come back to Memorial Arena tonight ominously close to the end of their 1964 lacrosse road.

Shamrocks dropped the second game of their best-of-five Inter-City Lacrosse League semi-final, 12-4, to New Westminster last night to give the New Westminster club a 2-0 lead in the series.

Although New Westminster didn't score until late in the first quarter, Shamrocks never really looked dangerous. Cliff Sepka sent the mainland club ahead 1-0, at 10:06, and Paul Parnell fired two of his three goals before the period ended.

The game was to be more than 23 minutes old before the Shamrocks were to get their first goal. Parnell's first score at 13:37 was a confused affair that brought screams of protest from the Shamrocks. Victoria's Billy Gray was called for interference and New Westminster awarded the ball.

But Gray, and nearly every body else, thought a penalty had been assessed. The Victoria players started for the box and before the situation could be straightened out, Parnell scored what amounted to a power-play goal. Strangely enough, the first real penalty wasn't called until 1:02 of the third quarter, when Victoria's Jim Watson went off for holding. Shamrocks picked up 12 minutes in penalty and New Westminster four. Parnell scored the only power-play goal of the night in the third quarter. New Westminster increased its lead to 5-0 in the second quarter before Don Ashbee finally scored for Victoria at 8:13. Tom Collett brought Shamrocks a little closer with a breakaway goal with about four minutes left in the half.

12 minutes in penalties and the brilliant netminding of Les Norman who stopped 10 shots and gave up only one goal in the third period while his teammates scored four times to leave the score at 9-1.

New Westminster got another break in the third quarter when Bill Wilkes scored with both clubs playing shorthanded. Don Boyd, ragging the ball down the boards for New Westminster, threw a pass to Wilkes who was cruising near the Shamrock goal.

Wilkes didn't catch the pass cleanly and it deflected off his stick into the Shamrock net. Shamrocks' checking was spotty and their pursuit of loose balls unenthusiastic. Gray, usually a standout at retrieving the loose ones, had trouble hanging onto the ball all night.

Shamrocks may be strengthened tonight by the return of defenseman Ed Kowalyk. Kowalyk, who has been holidaying in Europe, returned to Victoria late last night and may dress for this evening's contest.

for holding. Shamrocks picked up 12 minutes in penalty and New Westminster four. Parnell scored the only power-play goal of the night in the third quarter. New Westminster increased its lead to 5-0 in the second quarter before Don Ashbee finally scored for Victoria at 8:13. Tom Collett brought Shamrocks a little closer with a breakaway goal with about four minutes left in the half.

12 minutes in penalties and the brilliant netminding of Les Norman who stopped 10 shots and gave up only one goal in the third period while his teammates scored four times to leave the score at 9-1.

New Westminster got another break in the third quarter when Bill Wilkes scored with both clubs playing shorthanded. Don Boyd, ragging the ball down the boards for New Westminster, threw a pass to Wilkes who was cruising near the Shamrock goal.

Wilkes didn't catch the pass cleanly and it deflected off his stick into the Shamrock net. Shamrocks' checking was spotty and their pursuit of loose balls unenthusiastic. Gray, usually a standout at retrieving the loose ones, had trouble hanging onto the ball all night.

Shamrocks may be strengthened tonight by the return of defenseman Ed Kowalyk. Kowalyk, who has been holidaying in Europe, returned to Victoria late last night and may dress for this evening's contest.

Behind Closed Door

Muzzled MLAs Walk Out

Two Social Credit MLAs walked out of Thursday's mini-metro study meeting, about half an hour after it had started—apparently angered because they were to be muzzled.

Victoria MLA Waldo Skillings was first to leave the conference room, followed seconds later by Saanich MLA John Tisdalle. Esquimalt MLA Herbert Buch stayed on.

Asked why he left, Mr. Tisdalle said municipal and unorganized representatives indicated they felt MLAs should not have a voice, and should only attend as observers.

"There was no vote. It was just indicated by several members and the minister (Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell) made that ruling," complained Mr. Tisdalle.

"There is little purpose for a man to sit there if he can't interject, interview and cross-examine," he said.

"No comment," said Mr. Skillings when asked what happened at the meeting. "No comment whatsoever," he added.

"There was a ruling the press would not be admitted. There was no vote. The chairman ruled. I had no choice. I didn't agree with the ruling, but I wasn't allowed a voice," complained Mr. Tisdalle.

He said the meetings were of a simple exploratory nature and he thought they should have as much light as possible.

"I want the press in whether it is biased or opinionated, or not. If I have something to say, I will say it openly, even if the others want to go behind in-camera sessions," Mr. Tisdalle said.

'I Like It Wide Open'

"I like it wide open. I think its success will be guaranteed only by full and comprehensive understanding."

Prior to the meeting, Mr. Campbell said that he would bring up the question of admitting the press to delegates and that word would be sent to the corridor where reporters were waiting.

"You can understand," said the minister, "that if legislation is formulated at this or a subsequent meeting that I would be in rather an awkward position if it got to the public before the legislature."

But political observers noted that during legislative sessions committees of MLAs are set up to study specific problems leading to legislation. The press is admitted to the committee meetings and only excluded from the one or two meetings where the actual legislation is framed.

Mr. Campbell said that he believed that presence of reporters might inhibit discussion in the early stages of discussion.

"I know, of course, that these people will be reporting back. It is comparatively simple in the case of municipal councils but rather more difficult in the case of rural delegates."

It was learned that Mr. Skillings and Mr. Tisdalle left after discussion of their function at the meeting, and when it had been decided that they would have no voice in the meetings but would merely act as observers.

Firmly Ushered Out

After delegates assembled, photographers were allowed in the caucus room to take pictures of the group. Then they, and reporters, were gently but firmly ushered out and the door, with its "no admission" sign, closed.

New Democratic Party leader Robert Strachan appeared briefly before the meeting to greet delegates and then left.

"Of course I think this meeting should be public," he said when asked what he thought. "This is a public matter and the people should be fully informed of what is going on."

Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell said, "We are working in the area of legislation, and it is normal procedure for the legislature to get it first."

"The question of whether or not the press would be admitted was not put to a vote, although there was some discussion."

Reeve Alfred Wurtele of Esquimalt said: "The minister made the point that it was very much legislative work, even though we have no power of making a final decision, and he said that he would take the responsibility for excluding the press."

"As reeve of Esquimalt I can go along with this; I would like to talk with my council first. There was no vote taken."

William Reader, Colwood, said that "the matter was discussed, and some were for it, but there was no vote. The minister just made the ruling."

By IAN SMITH

Cautious optimism seemed to be the keynote Thursday as the mini-metro study group held its first meeting behind closed doors at the legislative buildings.

Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell, who originally proposed the idea of a joint services board, said that the delegates from south Vancouver Island areas had agreed in principle to a basic approach.

"Now we want to fit the financial flesh to the bare bones of the idea," he said.

MEETING SEPT. 2

He indicated that the group would start studying possible financial setup at the next meeting, which was set for 2 p.m. Sept. 2.

Mr. Campbell said that the meeting "went well, in the sense that some people seemed to have misconceptions that were cleared up."

NO PAT ANSWER

"For instance, a few delegates thought that we had some pat answers ready, when of course we didn't. We're here to find those answers."

Nevertheless, Mr. Campbell had done some major preparation for the meeting. He had a seven-page mimeographed proposal ready for the perusal of the delegates.

NINE-ITEM LIST

The proposal took the form of a nine-item list of possible functions of the board, worked out under deputy minister J. E. Brown by representatives of the provincial and municipal governments since Mr. Campbell first announced the mini-metro scheme.

Mr. Campbell indicated that the study group accepted the proposals "in principle."

PROPOSED PLAN

Under the plan advanced, the mini-metro board would deal with regional planning, public health, hospitals, water, waste disposal, sewage disposal, air pollution, regional parks, library and welfare facilities.

Among the proposals presented Thursday was one that the boundaries of the mini-metro region should include all of school districts 61 and 63, and that portion of district 62 lying southeast of the northwest boundaries of the Otter and Goldstream Land Districts and east of Finlayson Arm.

REPRESENTATION

It was felt that the members of the board should represent the present six municipalities and the six special areas of North Saanich, View Royal, Langford, Colwood, Metcheson and Sooke.

It was suggested that the elected representatives from the unorganized areas should hold office for two years, but no clear opinion was expressed by Mr. Brown's committee on the length of office for other representatives.

VOTING ISSUE

It was generally agreed by Mr. Brown's group that no representative should have more than five votes and that the representatives of municipalities with more than one vote should have equal weight, although a senior delegate might be assigned the extra vote or votes where equal distribution was not possible.

SUBSTITUTES

One of the most important decisions reached was that a representative would be able to appoint someone to represent him if he were unable to attend a meeting. This seemed to overcome the objections that many members of the group had expressed about the lack of night meetings.

Mayor R. B. Wilson called the first meeting "a very good beginning; these are good starting points," and other delegates seemed to concur.

'VERY SATISFIED'

Ralph Willing of Langford said, "I was very satisfied with the way the meetings have gone to date. I've always been in favor of this in principle, but of course we must get into the financial aspects before we can say for certain."

William Reader, Colwood, called it "a rather frank discussion of a few of the problems we intend to discuss. We'll just have to wait and see what the next meetings bring."

Closed by Police

Young Shoeshiners Out of Business

Two Victoria shoe-shine girls have been forced by police to close down their Causeway enterprise.

The Oak Bay secondary students—Diane Stewart, 14, of 1416 Saint David and Liz Brimacombe, 16, of 850 Victoria Avenue—set up a shoe-shine service Tuesday on the Causeway across the road from the legislative buildings.

At 25 cents for men and 15 cents for ladies, about 30 sets of shoes had been shined on each of Tuesday and Wednesday. Ten pairs of shoes had been shined by Thursday noon when a policeman came along to say the business would have to be closed up. No licence.

Diane and Liz found out at city hall a licence would cost $10.

"We don't want to spend that much money to stay in business; we go back to school soon, anyway," said Diane.

She plans on sending a letter to the mayor asking that city council give them special dispensation to operate their shoe shine stand until school starts.

The girls are not bitter. They said, "The policeman was very polite, very nice about it."

Boys Unearth $1,150 But Whose Is It?

By BOB PETHICK

A Saanich youth found an easy way to dig up $1,150 Thursday—he used a shovel.

But now the Saanich police are faced with a problem. If they can find the person who buried it does he get it, does the finder get it or does the owner of the property get it? The best police can offer at the moment is that they are still investigating.

It began in the basement of a house at 426 Dupplin, which was owned by Mrs. Isabel Page, 572 John.

She hired Joseph Johnson, 15, of 469 Dupplin to dig out

a part of the basement floor to take an oil tank.

He hit pay dirt at 11:50 a.m. Thursday—five $100 bills, three $50 bills, 20 $20 bills and 10 $10 bills.

The bills ranged from 1835 to 1937 and were wrapped in a piece of stainless steel.

Joseph took the money home to his mother who phoned Saanich police.

Then Mrs. Page phoned police to find out about ownership.

SON PRESENT

He said his son, Jim, 14, was there when the money was found.

"I have spoken to my lawyer about it," he added.

Asked how he would feel about receiving $1,150 he pointed out "it won't be mine it will be my wife's."

Health Director Retiring

By A. H. MURPHY

Dr. Elizabeth Mahaffy will retire at the end of August after 10 years of public health service in this area.

She has held her present post as school health services director for the past three years and prior to that she was head of the Metropolitan Board of Health for seven years.

After that, says Dr. Mahaffy, "I will travel—just where I haven't yet decided."

After a period of travel, the tiny woman with the bright, intelligent face will probably settle in Alberta.

"I love Victoria and have spent a good part of my life

here," she says, "but the climate just does not agree with me I'm afraid."

Daughter of a judge, Dr. Mahaffy went to school in Red Deer, Alberta. She attended University of Alberta, graduated in medicine and interned at Cedars of Lebanon Hospital, Los Angeles, after which she joined the Los Angeles city maternity service.

Her childhood dreams of India became a reality when she joined the Women's Christian Medical College in the Punjab.

Dr. Mahaffy was home on leave when the Second World War broke out. She joined the RCAF, one of only 15 women doctors in the service.

Out of the RCAF in 1946 she came to Victoria and practised here for a time. In November, 1948, she joined the city's public health service. Three months later she became assistant MOH in charge of schools.

After post-graduate work at the University of California, Dr. Mahaffy was confirmed as medical health officer in Sept., 1953.

This post Dr. Mahaffy held until the Metropolitan Board of Health was formed in 1961.

Port Alberni Rendezvous For 'Sisters'

PORT ALBERNI — Sister ships, built in Denmark, have met for the first time as they load cargo on the West Coast of B.C.

Moored bow to stern at the assembly dock in Port Alberni, the Mv. Helle Skou and the Mv. Rikke Skou look like identical twins, but the 417-foot freighters are five years apart in age.

SAME PLANS

The Helle, Capt. H. Olsen, was built in 1961 and the Rikke, Capt. H. Joensen, in 1955 from the same plans in the same shipyard in Helsingore, Denmark.

Tramps, in the sense that they have no regular run, the freighters look like ladies in their fresh white paint. They have both roamed the world without ever having been in the same place at the same time until last week when they met in New Westminster and proceeded on to Port Alberni.

LOADING LUMBER

The Helle came from Oakland, Calif., and the Rikke from Japan. Each of the ships has a gross tonnage of 7,015 and carries a crew of 34. They are loading lumber here for the U.K. and the European continent. Next stop for the Helle is Hull, while the Rikke is destined for London.

Jet Salute To Open Comox Day

COMOX — Three supersonic Voodoo interceptors will fly over Comox Bay at 2:15 p.m. Saturday to boom in the official opening and RCAF salute to the village of Comox's fifth annual Comox Day celebrations.

As the 1,200-mile-an-hour interceptors twist and turn away, a Search and Rescue Unit Albatross will demonstrate a jet-assisted take-off.

SIMULATED RUN

A medium-range Neptune reconnaissance patrol aircraft will make a one-engine fly-past and a simulated bombing run over the bay.

Four para-rescue jumpers will parachute from a twin-rotor helicopter into the water opposite Comox wharf. They will be taken from the water by RCAF crash boats Heron and Black Duck, while the helicopter gives a demonstration of its unusual abilities.

RED KNIGHT

Highlight of the show will be the 2:30 p.m. appearance of the RCAF's Red Knight, who will make a low level, smoking fly-past and pull up to give a 15-minute sequence of precision aerobatic manoeuvres.

During the day, spectators can also enjoy two band concerts by the 40-piece RCAF Training Command Band, at the village hall in the afternoon and before the evening sunset ceremony at Legion Park.

Decision Reserved

PORT ALBERNI — Magistrate W. E. MacLeod reserved his decision until Wednesday when Bruce Wayne Jordan was tried here on a dangerous driving charge.

The charge followed an accident last month on a city street in which Larry Milligan was fatally injured.

Awards Listed

PORT ALBERNI — Scholarships and bursaries, offered by local organizations to outstanding students of the Alberni Valley, have been announced this week.

Among the winners is Edna Shepherd, 18, who headed all Grade 12 students of the province in government examinations, and will receive the lieutenant-governor's silver medal.

She has been awarded the $500 bursary given by Local 1-85 IWA.

Miss Shepherd will enter University of Victoria in September to work toward a BA degree.

Margaret Horner has been awarded the MacMillan, Blodell & Powell River Ltd. university entrance scholarship valued at $500. She also won a $350 Norman McKenzie Alumni scholarship and she will study mathematics and English at UBC this fall.

Shiela Westlin, Great Central, will enter Nanaimo Vocational School to study practical nursing. She is the winner of the MB & PR general program award.

Others named as bursary winners are Joan Macrae, Local 592, Pulp and Sulphite Union, $500; Diane Alleyne Tassie, Ladies' Auxiliary to Somass Branch, Canadian Legion, $250; Michael J. Mahoney, Knights of Columbus, $250; Ursula Malachowski, Alberni District Teachers Association, $200.

'Couldn't Care Less' Police Quote Accused

DUNCAN — Unable to pay forthwith three fines totalling $150 for two charges of speeding and one charge of failing to stop and state his name, Douglas B. Cotter of Duncan was given the alternative of serving 10 days at Oakalla.

Court was told Cotter has 13 previous convictions under the Liquor Control Act and the Motor Vehicle Act and magistrate Lance Heard told him, "It would appear you utterly ignore these convictions."

Police said complaints were received Aug. 12 from a private citizen about Cotter's fast driving on Government Street. He finally turned into Club Road and was clocked at 45 miles an hour in a 30 zone there.

Police said Club Road is gravelled and unfit for speeds of more than 10 miles an hour. When the constable remarked to Cotter he should be more careful or he would kill someone, Cotter replied he could not care less, court was told.

Six days later, Cotter was spotted by police and clocked at 50 miles an hour in a 30 zone on Cliffs Road. Court was told he ignored the red flashing light on the police car, drove through a ditch into a wooded area to escape, and later refused to state his name.

Teen-Agers Welcomed By Canvass

NANAIMO — Nanaimo and district United Appeal directors have decided to accept as canvassers persons as young as 17.

They will be asked to help the appeal's residential canvass in the two-day blitz throughout the residential areas of the school district Oct. 28 and 29.

Campaign chairman Rudy Alexander suggested young people would make excellent canvassers if they were enthusiastic, and had proper information and supervision. Supervision will come from adult canvassers from the member agencies of United Appeal.

The "blitz" style of canvass will also be used in the commercial drive this year. Commercial division chairman Haig Burns said in the interests of efficiency and convenience for both the canvassers and businessmen, the canvass will be held during a one or two-day period.

Guns in School?

NANAIMO — The school board is considering the introduction of a junior firearms safety program into Grade 8 classes in the district.

The course was suggested as an extra curricular activity by Nanaimo and District Fish and Game Protective Association.

Education chairman Dr. Roy

MacMillan will study the program and bring in a recommendation to the board.

The board also endorsed the proposal of the Parent-Teachers Council for Child's Own Theatre, a project that offers children's films for youngsters from four to 12 years. The board offered facilities and asked for further information about the proposal.

$89,723 LOOT RECOVERED AFTER POSTAL STAKEOUT

By BOB PETHICK

A Saanich detective stake-out in the Victoria post office Thursday led to the recovery of $89,723 in certified cheques and post office money orders.

As a result of their investigation, Saanich detectives charged a 32-year-old mother of two with breaking and entering and theft and dealing in forged documents.

Saanich police had been working on the theft of $9,000 in money orders from the A & B Hardware, 650 West Burnside, which was broken into in March.

Bank Bill Stalled In House

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons passed two private bills and gave second reading to a third Thursday, but the bill to incorporate the proposed Bank of Western Canada failed again to get through second reading in the weekly hour devoted to private bills.

Henri Lablanc (Creditiste-Comptons-Frontenac) held up the bill with a sweeping criticism of the Canadian banking system.

TIGHT HOLD
Chartered banks have such a tight hold on the country that average citizens have no room to breathe, he said. The trouble could not be corrected by establishing another.

Jack Horner (PC — Acadia) said the proposed bank is manœuvring under its name. It would be more appropriate to call it the Bank of Eastern Canada since the control rested in the East.

The Commons gave second reading to a bill to incorporate the Laurentide Bank of Canada. There was no discussion.

It gave third and final reading to a bill allowing the Guarantee Company of North America to also use the name La Garantie, Compagnie d'assurance de l'Amerique du Nord.

Man Held In Prison 'Illegally'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Lawyer Gordon Dowling said Thursday he will proceed with habeas corpus in an attempt to obtain the release of a man found not guilty of attempted murder by reason of insanity and who he said now is being illegally held in prison.

Paul McCullagh was arrested after firing a rifle in a city cafe and was charged with attempted murder. A jury found him not guilty by reason of insanity Dec. 28, 1961.

Mr. Dowling said he was sent to Escondido Mental Hospital but since then, by various orders-in-council, had been alternately held in Oakalla Prison and at the Chilliwack forest camp, operated by penal authorities.

In addition to the money orders, a perforator and post office stamp used to validate the money orders had been stolen.

"We were convinced that anyone who would take the amount of money orders and the stamp and perforator took them to do business with," said Det. Sgt. Robin Stewart last night.

But the big find was $79,223 in certified cheques which were made out to different names and, police said, could be cashed in any bank in Canada.

Police did not elaborate on how the cheques had been certified but said the method of obtaining and certifying them was still under investigation.

BEHIND COUNTER
A two-day stake-out in the post office ended when a woman came in to get her mail at the general delivery window, at 12:05 p.m. Thursday.

An arrest was made by Det. William Stephenson who was seated behind the counter.

The suspect was taken to Saanich police station for questioning. Saanich detectives and a police woman Mrs. Jeanne Michaud went to a city residence with the suspect and a search warrant.

Police later recovered three suitcases, three rifles, a number of money order stubs, the cheques and uncashed money orders and several passports made out in different names.

The cheques were in big denominations.

British Cargo Ferry Shows Up the Navy

LONDON (AP) — They called out the Royal Navy and the Royal Air Force Thursday to chase a stolen luxury yacht suspected of carrying one of the great train robbers who had just escaped from prison.

But a ferryboat beat the Royal Navy to the kill—and found only two boys who had escaped from a reform school.

An armed boarding party was assembled on the sub-chaser HMS Russell, which had sped from her berth at Glasgow. A submarine was diverted from routine patrol. An admiral directed operations.

As they rushed toward the stolen yacht, in the Irish Sea, the Slieveamore, a work-stained British railways cargo ferry, stumbled onto the yacht and drew alongside.

Two boys, aged 14 and 16, were taken off the yacht, the Wild Venture. Finally the Russell came up and took the stolen vessel in tow, 12 miles off Dublin.

The Slieveamore, the Russell and the Wild Venture then began a triumphant procession back to Holyhead in north Wales, near the point where the yacht was stolen.

The train robber? Police were still looking for him.

Theft of the 75-ton yacht, valued by her owner at about £60,000, had all the earmarks of a professional job. Police immediately suspected it might be carrying Charles Frederick Wilson, who escaped from prison last week. Wilson had just started a 30-year term for his part in the £2,800,000 ($7,800,000) train robbery last year.

For Olympics

Satellite in Position

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — Syncom 3 Thursday received a firing command designed to station it high above the earth as the world's first truly stationary satellite.

The U.S. Space Agency said it would be several hours before results of the firing are known.

The "Olympic Star" satellite, launched Wednesday, is intended to jockey into a hovering position high above the mid-Pacific Ocean where it would be able to televise the Olympic Games from Japan to North America.

As the satellite swept above Sumatra at 10:17 a.m. PDT Thursday, a station at Salisbury, Australia, beamed the firing signal. A space agency statement said a small rocket aboard Syncom 3 ignited as planned and burned for 19.6 seconds, the prescribed time.

The statement said preliminary data indicated the satellite was performing normally, but

"It would be a number of hours until it is known whether the satellite has indeed achieved the world's first truly stationary orbit."

The firing was to switch Syncom 3 from a wide-looping path ranging from 695 to 23,675 miles high into a circular stationary orbit in which both the high and low points would be about 22,300 miles up and the craft would hang over one spot of the earth permanently.

B.C. Sacred Charges

Rightists Use Thompson

VANCOUVER (CP) — The president of the British Columbia Social Credit League said Thursday there is growing disenchantment in B.C. party circles with the national leadership of Robert Thompson.

George Driedger said it is time Mr. Thompson publicly dissociated himself with what he termed a right-wing movement that included Ron Gowick, head of the Christian Action Movement.

CLARIFY POSITION

Mr. Driedger, in an interview, said the party leader also should clarify his position toward federal Liberals.

The B.C. president said he will ask a league board meeting to demand such a statement from Mr. Thompson.

"I am personally dissatisfied that some people have used Bob Thompson," he said, "and in the process have caused embarrassment to the B.C. Social Credit League."

He said at the present time "there is growing dissatisfaction with the way the party is being led."

Red Attack

GI, Three Officers Killed by Viet Cong

PHU TUC (UPI) — Three U.S. army officers and one American enlisted man were slain by Communist Viet Cong guerrillas in a battle near here, it was announced today.

The Americans were with government forces which traveled to the area when it was attacked in force by the guerrillas Thursday.

Earlier, Communist fighters had devastated a government outpost near this village in the Mekong Delta, killing seven Vietnamese and wounding 13.

Airborne government troops drove off the guerrillas, killing two and capturing five. An American helicopter participating in the relief operation was shot down. The crew escaped injury.

The Viet Cong, in battalion strength, launched the assault at 2:45 a.m., with heavy fire from 60 mm mortars.

The outpost was after hours after the attack. When news arrived at the scene, survivors were dragging the charred bodies of two girls from the ruins. The body of a boy was nearby.

Congo Forces Reinforced

LEOPOLDVILLE (AP) — Troop and ammunition reinforcements were rushed by air Thursday to Congolese forces losing ground in defending Bukavu from rebel hands. Three Americans were reported missing.

Radio messages from Bukavu's garrison of more than 800 soldiers said they had been pushed by the Communist-backed rebels back into the European quarter of Bukavu, the last important northeastern Congolese city still in government hands.

The U.S. Embassy in Leopoldville said no word had been received from Vice-Consul Lewis R. Macfarlane, 25, of Seattle, Wash., and two army officers attached to the U.S. military mission to the Congo.

They are Col. William A. Davis, 50, a counter-insurgency expert, and Lt.-Col. Donald V. Rattan, 40, an Alexandria, Va., infantry officer.

Consul Richard Matherson of Fresno, Calif., and the other five members of his staff notified the embassy by radio that they had reached safety at Kamembe Airport, about three miles from Bukavu, in neighboring Rwanda Republic.

A radio operator in the Belgian Consulate at Bukavu sent word that he was hit by a machine-gun bullet inside the consulate building, but not seriously wounded, and that another Belgian was killed in the attack.

WINNIPEG (CP) — An ECAF spokesman said Thursday Peter Fross of Salt Lake City has been found alive on the shore of Lake Athabasca in a search for two Americans missing on a 500-mile flight between Edmonton and Stony Rapids, Sask. The other man was reported to be dead.

Groos Not Apologizing for Ensign Stand

OTTAWA (CP) — David Groos, (L-Victoria) acknowledged in the Commons Thursday he had written replies to his constituents saying he would do everything possible to try to keep the Red Ensign flying as Canada's national flag.

Liberal party policy is the proposed maple leaf flag. Mr. Groos made the acknowledgement after George Chatterton, Conservative MP from the neighboring riding of Esquimalt-Saanich, read letters Mr. Groos had written to his constituents earlier this year.

Deputy Speaker Lucien Lamoureux said he doubted the propriety of Mr. Chatterton reading letters written by another MP. But he admitted he had no authority for such a ruling.

He said Mr. Chatterton's reading of the letters wasn't in the spirit of debate.

Mr. Chatterton said he had authority from the recipients of Mr. Groos' letters to read them in the Commons.

He said he had read them to show that Mr. Groos and other Liberal MPs wouldn't be allowed to vote as they wished on the flag issue.

Mr. Groos said he has been a supporter of the Red Ensign and that he makes no apologies for this stand.

However, when the flag had become an issue he had seen the need of looking far beyond his own personal views, of taking a detached view.

He had been heartened by the reaction of his constituents.

He said Victorians have taken a tolerant, restrained and understanding approach to the flag issue and that his mail indicates they are changing their view on the flag.
